STANDARD OIL OFFICIAL ARRESTED

REFUSAL TO ANSWER SENATE COMMITTEE CAUSE OF WARRANT

Contempt Charge May Follow—Faces Heavy Penalty

(BULLETIN)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Col. Robert M. Stewart, the defiant head of the Standard Oil Co., of Indiana, secured his release from the custody of the United States senate today on a writ of habeas corpus.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Under arrest in his hotel suite Colonel Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana and one of the leading oil figures in the country, faced a "trial" today at the bar of the senate on contempt charges, growing out of his persistent refusal to answer questions at the Teapot Dome inquiry into disposition of the Continental Trading Company's $3,080,000 Liberty Bond fund.

Stewart spent the night in custody of John J. McGrain, a deputy sergeant-at-arms of the senate. Prisoner and jailer spent the night on comfortable hotel beds.

Stewart will be taken before the senate at noon today, in response to the warrant issued by Vice President Dawes at the direction of the senate, which adopted a resolution ordering his arrest by an unanimous vote. The oil man will be given an opportunity then to purge himself of contempt by answering the questions. If he continues in his defiance, the senate will be asked to order his imprisonment in a "common jail" for contempt.

Stewart faces a penalty of from one to twelve months in jail and a fine of any amount up to $10,000. If he is sentenced for contempt, he probably will be given a three-month term, along with a $1,000 fine—the same penalty meted to Harry F. Sinclair when the latter was convicted of contempt in the District of Columbia Supreme Court two years ago.

In the meantime, Stewart will have recourse to the courts through a writ of habeas corpus. His attorneys were ready to file such a writ when and if the senate passes sentence on the oil man. This would bring the whole issue into the federal courts and Stewart might get a decision, ordering his release on the ground that the senate had exceeded its constitutional powers.

The questions which brought Stewart to his present plight were:

1. "Do you know of any one who received any of these bonds that the Continental Company was purported to have dealt in?"
2. Have you discussed any of these bond transactions with Mr. Sinclair or has Mr. Sinclair discussed any of these bond transactions with you?"

To both questions, Stewart replied that he "respectfully declined to answer." He said first, though, that he had never received any of the bonds nor had he delivered any of them to anybody.

SORROWING FATHER ON STAND FOR STATE IN HICKMAN TRIAL

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 4.—A sorrowing father today faced the ordeal of living over again the terrifying moment when he picked up the lifeless thing which had been his little daughter.

Perry M. Parker, father of the slain Marion, headed the list of thirty-eight state witnesses summoned to the hall of justice today as the trial of William Edward Hickman for the kidnapping and murder of the 12-year-old school girl was resumed.

Included among those who waited to take the stand for the prosecution were seven alienists. They were prepared to give their expert opinion that Hickman was in his right mind when he stole and slew Marion Parker.

The first of these, Dr. Cecil Reynolds, was on the stand late yesterday when Superior Judge J. J. Trabucco ordered a special half-day session this morning.

Dr. Reynolds testified that he was positive that Hickman had "willed" the crime. The kidnapping was planned deliberately, Dr. Reynolds said, and when Hickman realized the danger that his captive might betray him into the hands of the police, he put her to death.

HOOVER-WILLIS DISPUTE MAY UPSET PEACEFUL G. O. P. RACE

Theodore Burton Sneers At Frank's Candidacy And "Favorite Son" Comes Back With Challenge To Hoover.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The peaceful and placid current of the Republican presidential race got out of its smooth bed today and started going over the rocks of controversy, resulting in a considerable boiling and churning of the waters.

The first "defi" of the 1928 has been hurled. It came from Senator Frank B. Willis, who was elected to run as Ohio's favorite and bone-dry son. It was directed at Herbert Hoover, the cabinet candidate who has never announced his candidacy, but who, nevertheless, has in operation the most vigorous and thoroughly organized campaign yet seen.

Willis has "dared" Hoover to come into the Ohio primary and try to take any of his delegates.

"And it should be understood," said Willis, "that this contest between Hoover and Willis) will be no kid-glove or powderpuff affair."

"Things will be called by their right names, provided we can think of the words. Candidates will have the opportunity to declare their position on many public questions about which the people of this country have long been in doubt."

Whether the Hoover managers will accept the challenge remains to be seen. However, the fact that the Republican race has at last got down to the challenging stage was regarded today as a healthful sign, and a return to political normalcy. It's been too quiet up to now, according to the practical politicians of Washington.

Willis' expedition was touched off by Rep. Theodore Burton, the veteran Cleveland who has been a Republican leader in Ohio for many years. Burton issued a statement intimating that Willis wasn't going anywhere in particular, and inviting the Hoover people to come in to the primary and make a contest for the delegates. Hoover sentiment, Burton allowed, is strong in Ohio and needs only some crystallization.

The Willis candidacy, Burton said, was predicated almost entirely on the assumption there would be a deadlock in the convention such as occurred in 1920 when Harding, another Ohio favorite son, slipped in. Burton cannot see any deadlock at Kansas City, hence he considers Willis' candidacy futile.

"We'll see about that," was Willis' rejoinder.

Therefore, the die is cast for the first big Republican battle of the year—if the Hoover people decide to accept the issue. Presidential candidates must file in Ohio by Feb. 24, with the primary on April 24.

SEEK TAXI DRIVER FOR WIFE MURDER

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 4.—Detectives today continued their search for Howard "Mooney" Cornell, 22, taxi-driver, for questioning in connection with the slaying of his pretty 22-year-old wife, Margaret, whose body was found in the Cornell home here late yesterday, with two bullet wounds in the head.

The woman, clad in night garments, apparently had been dead twelve hours, when Elbert Cornell, brother of Howard, discovered the body. Elbert and another brother, Arthur, were being questioned at Central Police Station this morning.

GUARD KILLED IN JAIL BREAK

ONE PRISONER SHOT SCALING WALL AND SECOND SURRENDERS

Two Armed Convicts Slay Keeper In Break For Freedom

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 4.—Joseph H. Tinney, state prison keeper, was shot and killed today, Harry Baxter, 33, a prisoner, was shot twice and critically wounded, and Frank Wunkowski, another prisoner, surrendered to guards after an attempted prison break.

Baxter was shot down as he was climbing a rope which he had thrown over the outer wall of the prison. He was taken to the prison hospital, where it was said there was little hope for his recovery.

Two bullets had entered his chest. Tinney, the guard, stumbled and crawled out of Wing Number Two of the prison at 6:35 a. m., five minutes after prison inmates had been awakened, and said to Joseph H. McChesney, the center keeper: "They got me, Mac; look out."

Tinney then collapsed and a few minutes later he was dead from a bullet in his abdomen.

McChesney shouted for help and notified other guards, and the prison siren was blown. The guards gathered in the prison center just as Wunkowski and Baxter, each armed with an automatic pistol, emerged from Wing Number Two into the prison center. Baxter ran to the outer wall, over which he threw a thin rope he was carrying, and he had climbed about six feet up the rope before the guards shot him down.

Wunkowski then turned, threw down the pistol he carried, put his hands in the air, and surrendered.

ALLEGED STORE ROBBER FOUND GUILTY OF KILLING WATCHMAN

FINDLAY, O., Feb. 4.—After deliberating five hours, a jury today returned a verdict of guilty in the first degree murder charges against John Leslie, 28, Detroit, charged with having slain Peter Grant, a night watchman, during a store robbery here last January. Mercy was recommended, saving Leslie from the electric chair.

Eugene Watson, 28, also of Detroit, held on similar charges will be tried this month.

Leslie with Watson, and David W. Willis and Bernice Miller of Kenton were implicated soon after Grant was slain and the Jackson department store robbed of $3,000. Soon after the robbery, Willis and the Miller woman were killed at Long Beach, Cal., in an auto accident.

Leslie was arrested six weeks ago at Dallas, Tex., while Watson was arrested at Detroit, soon after

SLAYER OF THREE POLICEMEN CAUGHT

BERLIN, Feb. 4.—The career of Johann Anton Hein, Germany's killer of policemen, ended today. He was captured at Wuerttemberg by a posse of 5,000 police, soldiers and citizens.

Hein, nicknamed "the Were-Wolf," robbed a Thuringian post-office and fled afoot and on a bicycle across Germany. In six days he covered 500 miles.

During his flight, Hein killed every policeman that approached him. He had killed three when captured.

The "Were-Wolf's" capture ended the greatest man-hunt in Germany since the war.

LEVINE PREPARE S PLANE FOR LONG NON-STOP MYSTERY FLIGHT

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Feb. 4.—Charles A. Levine, trans-Atlantic flyer, made last-minute preparations this morning for a long non-stop "mystery" flight in the monoplane, "Columbia," with Miss Mabel Boll, wealthy "Queen of Diamonds," as a passenger and Lieut. Wilmer Stultz as co-pilot.

Levine's destination is believed to be Havana, Cuba, 1,400 miles away but he had the plane loaded with enough gasoline to take him to the Panama Canal Zone or far into South America.

At 7:30 this morning the barograph was installed in the "Columbia" by David H. Strother, representative of the National Aeronautical Association.

The motors of the plane were given a final inspection by Thomas H. ("Doc") Kinkade, motor expert, who examined the motors of the plane in the Lindbergh, Byrd, Chamberlin, Payne, Grayson and other celebrated take-offs.

The plane was towed out of its hangar to the east end of the runway where mechanics began loading it with fuel. They had been instructed to put 450 gallons of gas in the tanks of the monoplane.

Clarence Chamberlin carried on their epochal flight to Germany. Stultz, who was the original pilot of Mrs. Frances Grayson's plane, the "Dawn," arrived at the field early. He was non-committal, declaring that it was part of his job "not to say anything." He admitted that they would fly toward Havana, which they expect to reach in fourteen hours.

They will probably attempt to fly on a direct line to Savannah, then strike a new course for Miami.

FAMOUS AVIATOR IS INJURED WHEN SHIP FALLS ON TAKE-OFF

Co-Pilot Also Hurt
Neither Serious;
Blame Runway

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 4.—Clarence Chamberlin, the trans-Atlantic flier, was slightly injured and his Martine-Bellanca plane was wrecked on the take-off of a flight to establish a new endurance record here early today.

The big ship crashed into a ditch from a height of 50 feet. Chamberlin's injury consisted of bruises and a burned hand. His co-pilot, Roger Q. Williams emerged with scratches.

Lack of a runway long enough for the heavily loaded plane to acquire the momentum necessary to take it high into the air was said to be the cause of the accident.

Chamberlin and Williams were out to break the world endurance record, held in Germany, of fifty-two hours, twenty-two minutes and thirty-one seconds.

Both were confident as they hopped into the plane and started off at 7:01 a. m. The plane started down the runway slowly, but gathering speed rapidly.

As Chamberlin neared the end of the prepared runway he "gave her the gas" and the ship rose into the air. Struggling under the heavy load of gasoline, the plane rose slowly and as it reached a height of about fifty feet, seemed to hover there.

Suddenly the ship seemed to flatten out and despite the frantic efforts of the famous pilot, it struck the ground heavily and then toppled over into a ditch.

Spectators rushed madly to the scene of the accident, only to find Chamberlin emerging from the cockpit with a smile.

As he emerged he carried the barograph and other sealed instruments which were to record the new struggle for an endurance record. These he sought to save from a possible fire.

"Well, we'll try it again," remarked Chamberlin with a grin.

YELLOW SPRINGS TO MERGE HIGH SCHOOL WITH ACADEMY SOON

Antioch Will Help Support Village School In Plan

Announcement of plans to merge the Yellow Springs High School and the high school of Antioch Academy was made this week following a meeting of the village board of education.

Plans for the consolidation were submitted to the board by N. S. Wilder, superintendent of the village public schools, and were accepted by the board, to become effective at the beginning of the school year next September.

Directors of the academy will pay into the treasury of the school fund $5,000 per year to be used for the betterment of education.

One teacher with a Master of Arts degree will be employed in the new high school to act in the capacity of critic.

The merger, taking effect when the new joint high school building is ready for occupancy, promises to provide for Yellow Springs an excellent educational system.

The new school building is to be erected on the picturesque property of the late John Bryan, which adjoins Antioch Glen.

The site contains fourteen acres and has been pronounced by architects to be of the most delightful locations for a school building in the state.

The Antioch Academy has been functioning for more than eight years and the high school had an average yearly enrollment of between thirty and forty students.

The elementary department of the academy will continue in operation in its own building.

QUIZ COSTA RICAN IN DISAPPEARANCE

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—A Costa Rican alleged to have written a letter demanding $25,000 ransom for the return of Miss Frances St. John Smith, missing Smith College student, was given a quiz by police headquarters today. The suspect, a painter of Yonkers, N. Y., was captured after he had picked up a decoy package hidden in a vacant lot.

Although the prisoner said he was Vivian Collins, 27, the ransom letter bore the signature of Robert Brown. It was sent last Thursday to Miss Anna W. Gramm, grand-aunt of the eighteen-year-old heiress, at the Smith home here. The writer stated that he and his sister were holding Miss Smith as a prisoner and that she would be liberated upon payment of the reward money of $10,000 and two railroad tickets to San Francisco.

COSGRAVE SAILS FOR EMERALD ISLE

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—William T. Cosgrave, president of the Irish Free State today is on the high sea sailing back to the Emerald Isle.

He and his party departed early today aboard the S. S. Olympic, whose sailing was delayed five hours that the sandy-haired little ex-grocer might receive a few more ovations.

ENGLISH PRODUCE NEW HIGH SPEED AUTO

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Great Britain's last word in racing automobiles will be taken to Daytona Beach, Florida, this month by Capt. Malcolm Campbell, famous British motor car racer, to compete in the international races. Capt. Campbell is now enroute to New York.

"I am sure I will be in a position to meet America's challenge for speed supremacy," said Capt. Campbell before sailing. "My car is as easy to control as a light one."

The machine has been christened "Blue Bird." It cost $100,000 and has 900 horse power. It is fitted with an engine similar to that in Lieut. Webster's seaplane which won the Schneider cup at Venice last year. With its long, lean lines and anti-skid "fin," it resembles some steel monster from a novel by Jules Verne or H. G. Wells.

The speed of the machine is one of the best kept secrets in the world. It is believed to be about 220 miles an hour, or better than the speed of Major Seagrave's car which made a new world record last year. Seagrave's car travelled 203 miles an hour.

The machine weighs two and one-half tons and looks like a huge toy. The mighty motor is let into the chassis and the whole car is so completely streamlined that wind resistance is reduced to a minimum.

Capt. Campbell said that American opposition cannot be taken lightly, but he was confident of victory. None of the secrets of the new car's construction will be allowed to leak out if Campbell and his staff of mechanics can prevent it.

MAYOR'S REPORT SHOWS FUNDS DERIVED FROM MUNICIPAL COURT

Revenue derived from operation of the mayor's court in January amounted to $365.10, including fines and costs assessed in both city and state cases and bond forfeitures, according to the monthly report prepared by Mayor John W. Prugh.

January was a comparatively quiet month in point of liquor law violations as compared with the corresponding month in 1927, which disclosed fines and costs assessed totalling $794.90 in city cases alone.

During January, 1928, the income for the city treasury was $300 in fines and costs in city cases, including $175 from fines and $125 from costs. This revenue is derived from twelve arrests, including ten offenses of disorderly conduct and two cases of intoxication.

Arrests for the month in all cases totalled twenty-seven. Five state cases are listed, resulting in fines amounting to $3 and costs totalling $26.10, a total of $29.10. Two persons were charged with petit larceny, one with assault while two were bound over to the grand jury for burglary and larceny.

Seven arrests were made for violation of the speeding law, two for parking autos incorrectly and one for driving past the red light. In the speeding cases, six motorists forfeited appearance bonds aggregating $27 while in the seventh instance, a $5 fine was imposed. Two offenses of parking out of line drew fines of $1 while a $2 fine was imposed for driving through the red light.

In January, 1927, police made nine arrests in city cases. The greater revenue for the city is attributed to the fact seven arrests were made for possessing liquor, resulting in heavy fines, one for disorderly conduct and one for intoxication.

24 HOUR Deposit Service

AFTER HOUR Depository

MAKE DEPOSITS ANY HOUR OF DAY OR NIGHT

Bank Your Money Each Night, Don't Take Chances With Burglars

Investigate the operation of our After Hour Depository by means of which funds may be banked at any hour of the night and on Sundays and holidays. Simple, handy and absolutely safe. Ask us about it today.

HOW IT WORKS

Doubtless the most dreaded hazard which a merchant experiences is that of leaving money in comparatively unprotected safes, registers, and tills.

Now the customers of the Commercial Bank lock their late cash receipts in heavy money bags, furnished by the Bank, and take them to the Bank, whatever the hour.

The customer unlocks the Depository entrance door (which is located near the sidewalk), draws out the automatic receiving carrier, places his deposit bag therein and lets go of the carrier handle.

Automatically the carrier sends the deposit swiftly into the safe or money chest.

The following morning the Banker opens the combination-and-key lock of the safe and brings the After Hour Deposits, in their respective individually locked bags, to a teller's cage. There the customer, at his convenience during the day, calls for his bag and enters his deposit in the regular way.

This is a Banking service which busy merchants and others cannot fail to appreciate.

Among the other important features of this After Hour Depository is the buzzer which sounds while the entrance door remains open, warning the customer to close and lock the door before leaving.

The opening of the door also registers upon an automatic electric counting device by which the Banker supervises and checks the use of the Depository.

The time required to make a deposit never exceeds a few seconds. Therefore, if the receiving carrier is held drawn out for an unusually long time, the presumption would naturally follow that it is being held out to no good purpose.

To meet this situation, the O. B. McClintock Company includes a special timing device by which the Burglar Alarm of the Bank will sound if the carrier is held drawn out beyond a limited time.

No would-be thief can endure for a moment the loud ringing of the McClintock Burglar Alarm.

The outside entrance door of the After Hour Depository is handsomely finished in attractive cast bronze. The heavy Depository chute and safe are embedded in reinforced concrete.

MURDERER OF MANY LAUGHS OVER DOOM IN TEXAS PRISON

HUNTSVILLE, Tex., Feb. 4.—A death cell at the state penitentiary today houses one of the biggest puzzles to penitentiary officials and students of human behavior this state has known. Incidentally George J. Hassell, the subject, sentenced to be executed on February 10, has one of the blackest criminal records ever recorded in Texas.

Hassell pleaded guilty to the murder of his wife and eight stepchildren at Farwell, Tex., a year ago. He admitted, also killing a woman and three small children in California. He says he has more to tell before he dies.

He has no feeling of remorse, no regrets and laughs in the face of the chair which will cause his death.

A Murderer's View
"I am luckier than you," he told an interviewer. "I know when I will die, but you do not know what day you will be shot, hurt in a wreck or how you may suffer with some fatal illness. You have worries and have to work, while I am being guarded and fed well for my execution."

Again he has said that he would give his life if someone would explain to him why he killed the women and children he loved. He quarreled with his wife at Farwell. She had been his brother's wife. Four months after his brother's death he married her. He admitted before killing her with a hammer that he had improper relations with two of his stepdaughters, one of whom was to be a mother.

In Whittier, California, he was living with a woman and her three small children. They were in bed one night laughing and joking when suddenly he was seized with a desire to kill. He choked the woman and the babies to death and buried them underneath the house. The remains were found following his confession last year in Farwell, almost ten years after the first tragedy.

He admits having lived with three wives and seven women from three months to three years. The fate of six of his women paramours and one of his wives remains unknown.

Doesn't Seem to Worry
Despite his having killed thirteen helpless persons in two wholesale murder sprees Hassell does not have a worry. He has a smile that disarms the most antagonistic person, and a manner that brands him as a real happy-go-lucky fellow.

He served several penitentiary terms for deserting the army, the navy and for swindling. He planned a wholesale murder at 17, but drank so much whiskey he could not carry out his plans. He was going to murder his stepmother and a group of her relatives.

He was a consistent churchgoer for a large part of his life and bragged that he could outpray any man in his county. He said that he prayed at church in the daytime and chased about with girls at night.

"Never Wrecked a Home"
For all of his wild affairs and his great attraction to women he declares he never wrecked a home—he merely destroyed them. Hassell swears he will go to his death smiling. He wants to do that to show that he is unafraid—that he doesn't care. His only regret of the past few months in prison is that some of the facts of his life have been misrepresented. He is exceptionally honest, refuses to tell a lie and declares he does not owe a penny.

Psychologists say he has the brain of a man, the vitality of great historical characters and the emotions of a child. He cannot blush or cry—it is a physical impossibility.

AN UNUSUAL RECORD
Beginning back in October, 1927, a few Christmas orders began coming in at Downing's Studio, which increased each week and included babies, children and all kinds of subjects. The bulk of business done was good and all that was possible to execute in the time limit and during this whole run, up to Jan. 1st, there had not been a resetting, which is a record almost unheard of and proves the high efficiency and quality of the work done at this studio. THROUGH WITH WOMEN
LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Down by Terminal island, where the far-reaching boundaries of this city run into the sea, desperate men who are "through with women forever" are making their last stand. If a woman should move in on their quiet little colony their houseboats would be lowered into the water line and towed by chugging motorboats to a woman-free shore. "In just a few hours we could all be gone," one of the men said.

LEAP YEAR PROPOSAL
TOLEDO, O.—A young couple entered probate court. The bride inquired for the license bureau, and took charge of all details, and paid for the license. She then inquired for a magistrate to perform the ceremony. All the while the bridegroom stood by meekly. The ceremony over, however, he stepped out of the leap year atmosphere and asserted himself by insisting on paying the marriage fee. The bride admitted freely that she had proposed, "but," she added, "he proposed previously."

I CHOOSE TO RUN FOR PRESIDENT IN 1928!

The Rev. Alonzo Workman
DUNCAN, Okla., Feb. 4.—The Rev. Alonzo Workman feels it in his soul that he is to be the next president of the United States.

He told his wife so after he had notified secretaries of election boards in sixteen states that he was willing to be drafted for the Democratic nomination.

And, his wife replied, "Alonzo, dear, I wish you luck."

Just a few days before this remark to his wife, he sent a message to Democratic national headquarters as follows:

"I choose to run for president in 1928."

Workman is a farmer when he is not filling pulpits for ministers with regular charges. One of his farms is near Joplin, Mo., another near Duncan. Most of his time he spends here.

And he has never been a candidate for any other office.

MURDERER OF MANY LAUGHS OVER DOOM IN TEXAS PRISON

HUNTSVILLE, Tex., Feb. 4.—A death cell at the state penitentiary today houses one of the biggest puzzles to penitentiary officials and students of human behavior. This state has known. Incidentally George J. Hassell, the subject, sentenced to be executed on Feb.

February 10, has one of the blackest criminal records ever recorded in Texas.

Hassell pleaded guilty to the murder of his wife and eight stepchildren at Farwell, Tex., a year ago. He admitted, also killing a woman and three small children in California. He says he has more to tell before he dies.

He has no feeling of remorse, no regrets and laughs in the face of the chair which will cause his death.

A Murderer's View "I am luckier than you," he told an interviewer. "I know when I will die, but you do not know what day you will be shot, hurt in a wreck or how you may suffer with some fatal illness. You have worries and have to work, while I am being guarded and fed well for my execution."

Again he has said that he would give his life if someone would explain to him why he killed the women and children he loved. He quarreled with his wife at Farwell. She had been his brother's wife. Four months after his brother's death he married her. He admitted before killing her with a hammer that he had improper relations with two of his stepdaughters, one of whom was a mother.

In Whittier, California, he was living with a woman and her three small children. They were in bed one night laughing and joking when suddenly he was seized with a desire to kill. He choked the woman and the babies to death and buried them under the house.

The remains were found following his confession last year in Farwell, almost ten years after the first tragedy.

He admits having lived with three wives and seven women from three months to three years. The fate of six of his women paramours and one of his wives remains unknown.

Doesn't Seem to Worry Despite his having killed thirteen helpless persons in two wholesale murder sprees Hassell does not have a worry. He has a smile that disarms the most antagonistic person, and a manner that brands him as a real happy-go-lucky fellow.

He served several penitentiary terms for deserting the army, the navy and for swindling. He planned a wholesale murder at 17, but drank so much whiskey he could not carry out his plans. He was going to murder his stepmother and a group of her relatives.

He was a consistent churchgoer for a large part of his life and bragged that he could outpray any man in his county. He said that he prayed at church in the day, time and chased about with girls at night.

"Never Wrecked a Home" For all of his wild affairs and his great attraction to women he declares he never wrecked a home—he merely destroyed them.

Hassell swears he will go to his death smiling. He wants to do that to show that he is unafraid—that he doesn't care. His only regret of the past few months in prison is that some of the facts of his life have been misrepresented.

He is exceptionally honest, refuses to tell a lie and declares he does not owe a penny.

Psychologists say he has the brain of a man, the vitality of great historical characters and the emotions of a child. He cannot blush or cry—it is a physical impossibility.

REASON FOR LINCOLN'S GREATNESS

Numerous speakers will be called on as usual on Lincoln's birthday, February 12, for thoughts on the career of that profound thinker. The day comes on Sunday, so ministers will be among those who may tell what they think his career means for our day.

It is commonly used as a means of comforting boys and girls who come from very humble homes. They are taught that this man ascended to belong to the great ones of earth, from a home which had less of conveniences than the humblest dwelling of today. Such a career proves that there is no bar to achievement in America.

The American people come very near accepting a man or woman for what he or she does. If the achievement of the person is of benefit to the community, one's lowly origin is forgotten. People will also cease to laugh at any awkwardness that such a one carries up from the early beginnings.

But when they are told this story, young people need to form one idea quite strongly. People do not rise to any kind of triumph without effort. Lincoln had very little schooling probably not more than a year altogether. But he had access to a number of the world's greatest literary masterpieces. He read his Bible and Shakespeare and American history until he knew them and the rest of his small library by heart, and had taken deeply into his thought the profound wisdom of these sources of inspiration.

If like the average boy of today, he had spent his spare time on superficial reading and ordinary entertainment, the world would never have heard of him. The person who aspires to a noteworthy career, must like Abraham Lincoln seek inspiration from the world's best minds. But one must also like Lincoln be a person of action and practical judgment, and learn how to apply one's wisdom skillfully to the problems of every day life.

KEEPING UP LINCOLN'S STANDARDS

John H. Bartlett, first assistant postmaster general, who, before he became a Federal official was governor of the state of New Hampshire, made a speech the other day at Dayton, at a McKinley banquet at which he discussed the tariff in a way that brought it closer to the people than has been done in some time.

Taking the tariff activities of President McKinley as a basis, he laid down that American prosperity and American living standards cannot be maintained on a scale 200 and 300 per cent higher than that of other nations without a protective tariff, and that American efficiency in production, marvelous as it is, cannot offset this difference.

"We should never lose sight," he said, "that high wages, good wages, must ever be the first and paramount consideration, and that a high civilization is always the hand-maiden of high wages. Low prices in the necessities of life is paramount, but not of the first consideration, and wages secondary, then it follows that we admit free duty in competition with ourselves the products of foreign farms and workshops."

Speaking of the free trade argument that we are paying too much for our food, Mr. Bartlett said that it was true that the American market could be largely supplied with the cheap land products of the Argentine, New Zealand and Canada; the cheap dairy products of Australia and Northern Europe; cheap fruit from Southern Europe and Central America and eggs from China, but, when that food comes in American raised food is not bought and if the American farmer is thus handicapped, how long can we expect him to carry on and continue the purchase of the 40 per cent of the product of the American industries which he now buys? "Ruin the farmers, and 40 per cent of the products of American industry are taken away, and hence 40 per cent of the American industrial laborers are put out of employment." On the reverse, he said if free trade on farmers' implements etcetra is allowed, the American workmen who manufacture those and who buy ninety per cent of the farmers' output, would be reduced to unemployment and their opportunity for purchasing the American farmers' supplies would be destroyed.

A little more talk along the Bartlett lines and less about gold balances is what the American people need for a real understanding of this problem.

RADIO PICTURES

Wizards in the laboratories of the General Electric in Schenectady actually succeed in broadcasting to radio fans the sight as well as the sound of performers. It is the beginning of the development of a new field of amazing entertainment. Twisting dials on the "home television set" will come soon. One wonders if enough thought is given to the kind of music and the kind of entertainment that these amazing new devices can broadcast. Sometimes it seems that in this dizzy civilization we are more interested in astonishing methods than in substance.

DO WHAT YOU CAN

It is figured that about 23,000 persons will be killed and 700,000 hurt by automobiles in 1928. If every driver took it seriously on his heart to see that nobody was hurt as the result of his personal carelessness, think of the thousands who would be cut off this estimate. It's a great personal responsibility—to be borne by every man and woman who drives a motor car, and to be borne by every pedestrian also. For pedestrians have no more right to be careless than drivers.

My wife complains that she can get little work of any kind done at home, since the telephone sollicitors have become as numerous and disturbing as those who ring the front doorbell. The phone rings at least once a day to herald the dulcet-voiced sollicitor for magazine subscriptions, the charity worker, who has concert tickets to sell, the photographer's agent who wishes to make an appointment for a trial sitting, the electric company's man who thinks the Rascoe family is about due for a new vacuum cleaner, the dairy in New Rochelle, announcing a special sale in butter and eggs, the automobile sales go-getter who tries to give us an inferiority complex about our well-worn bus. This list is typical, without invention or exaggeration. I have found the best way to shut the persistent caller off is by announcing I am just hot-footing it for a train. Which is almost invariably the truth.

My neighbor's maid was narrating the tale of how her West Indian cousin had landed a job in a French household in one of the nearby suburbs. Her cousin, she asserted proudly, spoke French fluently. "The old lady of the house," she said, "my cousin always calls ma-mame. But the young one she never speaks to without calling the funniest names. I never heard such a thing. She calls her Madame Brazil. My wife repeated the odd name, mystified, once or twice before she figured out that this was Lucy's version of "mademoiselle."

I entered the sacred portals of the Union League club last week for the first time, the occasion being an exhibition of paintings by American artists. It was with a subdued air, a distant sense of intrusion, that I padded apologetically about in this sanctum of New York's most conservative. An attendant vouchsafed the information that the pictures had to be carted away by Saturday because the gentlemen wanted the room for their bridge game. And I had a vision of a score or more impatient gray bears, refusing to see any charm in Henry R. Rittenberg's exquisite "Nineteen," portrait of a girl, because they wanted the tables set up at once.

A young and doting father lured me into the shop called Childhood, Inc., in East Fifty-seventh street, last week, and called upon me to join him in his enthusiastic purchase of furniture for the room of his son, aged 2. It is possible, nowadays, to buy sturdy and tasteful appointments for a nursery. I decided, after an inspection of this shop's treasures. Small reproductions of good early American chairs and tables are on sale, in pine and maple, and they seem to me so far superior to the pink and white and garlanded pieces of furniture displayed in the department stores that no comparison is possible.

THE DIFFICULT ART OF SPECULATION

One of the most agreeable things about the stock market is that one may sometimes prosper there by being logical. Or at any rate, chances for success are greatly enhanced by doing what seems to be illogical. To follow mere obvious, surface logic is usually fatal.

Indeed to monkey with the stock market at all is illogical and unwise, in view of all stories one hears since childhood about the foolishness of attempting to beat an unbeatable game. I'm inclined to think that speculation is generally regarded as not only dangerous, but downright wicked. Profits from speculation are ill-gotten gains—because not won by the sweat of one's brow.

Yet of course every conservative, successful manufacturer is a speculator. He has to be. If he doesn't buy raw materials when they're cheap—when the market is advantageous—at least part of the time, he'll finally go bankrupt. No matter how clever a salesman or advertiser, he couldn't withstand the odds against him if he should always buy at top prices and sell finished products in a falling market. Even buying a home is speculation. Nobody would care to have a house on ground likely to drop in value, would he?

Maybe the very difficulty of speculation is what has brought it into disrepute. Most men who enter business eventually fall because of their inability to be successful buyers and sellers. Likewise most men who speculate in stocks lose all the money they risk. Naturally, men who have failed in such an enterprise—and are in the majority—do not speak any too highly of it. Neither do those of us who have been unable to learn how to play golf mention the game in terms of highest praise. But the fact remains that an occasional man speculates in the stock market as a sole means of livelihood, and contrives to do it well. He may not become a multi-millionaire, if he did, he would no longer have to bother with speculation. But neither does he go broke, for in that event he couldn't longer speculate.

Since the problem of trying to make money by buying and selling stocks seems to interest most people, I am going to keep on talking about it in this little space tomorrow and maybe for a few days thereafter.

How to Achieve Beauty

A HOME BLEACHING TREATMENT

You may be surprised that I should talk to you about a bleaching treatment at this time of the year. However, it is just the time when women should be reminded of the bleaching measures that are usually thought of only at the end of summer. Many women do not think of them at all, except after they have been out in the sun and acquired a good coat of tan. The truth is that many skins really need a little bleaching all the year around. They tend to get a yellowish cast, and this is especially true of the oily, sallow skin. Such a skin should be put through a bleaching regime at least once a month, and sometimes oftener. The daily use of an animating, skin-clearing cream is especially good to counteract this yellowing tendency in between bleaching.

Practically every woman needs to give her neck a little bleaching treatment during the winter, especially if she wears dark furs. Furs are very hard on the skin. They pick up dirt so easily and transfer it to one's neck, and they are only too likely to contain dyes which discolor the skin. In my mind, nothing looks so badly above a lovely evening gown as a discolored neck.

A good bleach for the neck is a half-and-half solution of peroxide in water. Lemon juice can also be used for this purpose in a one-to-three proportion with water. Both of these have drying qualities, and if used, should be counteracted with plenty of softening cream. I do not advise using them on the face. For your face and neck, you can use oatmeal and lemon in this manner. Make a little muslin bag and put a slice of lemon in the bottom of it. Then fill it with oat meal. Moisten it and rub it on the skin.

However, the simplest bleaching treatment is an adaptation of your regular basic beauty regime. Substitute for your regular cleansing cream one of the good bleaching creams, which can be purchased at the better stores. Then follow with your usual skin-clearing cream and the astringent or skin-toning lotion.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet For Children"

Answers to Correspondents.
"My daughter, my sister-in-law and I have been following your book, Diet and Health, with Key to the Calories. I have lost 40 pounds and my sister-in-law 100 pounds. My problem is my daughter. She is 16 years old, five feet six and one-half inch tall, and two weeks ago weighed 154. For the past two weeks she has averaged about 300 calories daily, but has not lost on ounce. Last year I had her under a specialist's care, who said she had glandular trouble and gave her medication, but it did not have the desired effect. I know you may think she is not dieting well, but I know positively that she is. My husband and relatives object to her dieting, but she may as well starve to death as to die worrying over her weight. Can you help us? Any change will be willingly paid."

"Mrs. F."
First let me tell you that I am not in private practice in any way, Mrs. F., so I have no charge to make thank Allah! Any help that I can give you I will give gladly through the column.

Now you say I will think she is not dieting well, and you are right. That's just what I do think. In the first place, if she goes on but 300 calories one day she is undereating very much, and the probability is that she is so starved that she overeats the following day and probably brings up her average number of calories to the maintenance number. Even though that's just what I do think, she had glandular trouble and were resting quietly in bed all of this time, she would reduce and reduce far more rapidly on so low a calorie intake as you think she has, for the number of calories needed for the internal work—circulation, respiration, etc.—averages over 1600 C. a day. Now it is possible, if she is on a very low diet, that her metabolism (chemistry of the body) is deranged and her tissues are holding an excess amount of water. I suggest that you have her go on 1000 calories a day, but be sure that her food is counted correctly and doesn't average more. Eliminate all salty foods and a large portion of her table salt, as salt helps to retain water. She must have a balanced diet—protein (growth food), which she needs in the form of three glasses of skim or buttermilk daily, or its equivalent in cheese, preferably cottage cheese, some meat, fish or eggs; and her full quota of vegetables and fruits in color, but she does not overeat on certain days and so nullify the effects of dieting on days when she is on the reducing diet.

(The instructions given in my book we have in condensed form. Those of you who desire these may have your pamphlets by sending ten cents in coin, to cover the cost of printing and handling—and a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope, with request.)

Late Marriages
M. asks me if I would advise a spinster of 55 years of age to marry.

Why not, M.? At 55 you ought still to be a young woman. As you send your question to a medical column, you probably want to know the health aspects of a marriage late in life, but as the health aspects of marriage may depend upon the heart aspects, I'll have to bring that phase in. If you love your man and he is free from common ailments, diseases, and if both of you realize that at your ages you are pretty well settled in your habits and probably won't brook any attempts to change them, there is no reason why you shouldn't marry.

(Yes, M., marry and adopt a baby (better two). Naturally you won't have any of your own. There are agencies in every city that will put you in touch with babies and children that are in need of homes. Better send for our list of books on the care and feeding of children. (Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.)

NOTE—Please send ten cents in COIN and fully self-addressed stamped envelope with orders for pamphlets on reducing and gaining.

CHINESE EGGS

(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe)

Boil six eggs twenty minutes. Remove shells, and when cold cut into slices. Make sauce of one tablespoon butter, one of flour, one cup soup stock, one-half green pepper seeded and chopped, salt to taste. When sauce begins to thicken add eggs carefully without breaking, and serve.

I wouldn't write again to the boy if I were you, "Lonely Peggy." He must be the kind of person with whom "out of sight is out of mind." Don't feel badly, dear, another more worthy friend will come along, you may be sure.

Sorry you did not get an answer, "Broken Hearted and Blue." Possibly you were too frank about your love for the boy and it frightened him. He didn't want to be taken so seriously on such short acquaintance. You might drop him a note and tell him you miss him and would like him to call, but be more reserved next time. If he pays no attention to it, there is nothing you can do. Sorry I can't be more encouraging.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Trouble has been simmering for quite a while in the realm of weather prophecy.

Latest developments look like actual warfare.

We have two kinds of meteorologists in this country:

1. The official priesthood, recognized by the government as the weather bureau of the department of agriculture.

2. All others.

The official bunch has the strength of unity and powerful backing.

Serene in same, their policy, until just now, has been to pay little attention to heterodox prophetic activities—simply to pooh-pooh 'em.

Unofficial meteorology has been scattered.

It hasn't lacked a fiery candidate for leadership—Herbert Janvrin Browne, long-range forecaster of rising reputation. The weather bureau says his forecasts are all bunkum, but his reputation for 'em's been rising, anyway.

However, Browne's following wouldn't follow.

Why Browne couldn't get any action isn't so hard to understand, when you consider the kind of folks he's affiliated with.

There's Dr. Charles G. Abbot, on whose discoveries concerning solar radiation Browne, to a great extent, bases his predictions—but Dr. Abbot's primarily interested in solar radiation and only incidentally in the weather.

There's the naval hydrographic office, which deals with ocean currents, and we've all heard what an effect they have on climate—but the hydrographic office hates to get into a row with the weather bureau.

There are the various aviation services—but they're young and unaggressive yet.

There's Prof. H. H. Clayton, recognized by the weather bureau itself as one of the world's foremost meteorologists, though it considers him wrong on the long-distance proposition—but he's a mild old scientist, who wouldn't quarrel with a rabbit.

There are the Argentine and Chilean and Australian and several other foreign weather departments—but they're away 'way off, and Browne can't bring 'em here to testify.

There are also some heretics in our own weather bureau—but they talk in whispers.

As to Browne, he doesn't lay claim to much scientific knowledge—merely says he has business reasons for wanting to foretell weather farther ahead than the weather bureau foretells it.

However, he offers enough expert evidence, to the effect that it can be done, to make the average layman stop, look and listen.

At all events, he got the bureau's goat the other day to the extent of extracting from Chief Marvin a statement denouncing the Browne system of weather prophecy in middling strong language.

That was what Browne's been waiting for.

An investigation was what he craved, and Chairman Charles L. McNary of the senate committee on agriculture—the weather bureau, take note, is an adjunct of the department of agriculture—wasn't long in hearing from him to that effect.

After all, nearly everybody's interested in the weather.

If McNary can see his way clear to granting this "probe," it can be guaranteed to draw crowds that an oil hearing never dreamt of. Incidentally, it may reveal a lot of things that many number of people would like to know about the weather.

SAUCE FOR THE GANDER

"What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander," so they say. If your boy friend steps out and then fibs about it, try a bit of "stepping" yourself. It may show him that it is not so cute an act as he thought. That's what one little girl did, but she's not quite sure she did right.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl of 16, and have been going with a boy and have grown very fond of him. He says he loves me, but doesn't act much like it. He told me if I did not go with other boys he would not go with other girls. I told him I wouldn't, and have kept my promise, but he hasn't. He would go to see another girl and tell me a big story. Last night I had a date with him and he called me up and said he had to go off. Since he wasn't coming I thought I would go out. When I reached the place, the first person I saw there was him. Please advise me what to do.

"Just Pal."

You did just right, Pal, and I'd give him to understand that as long as he isn't playing fair you will take back your promise. You are both too young to keep "steady company," anyway. Have a good time with all your friends.

Dear Mrs. Lee: My boy friend went to another town to work. He has been gone two weeks and hasn't written yet. I believe he is too bashful to write as he stopped with a year's less schooling than I had, he may not think he can write a good letter. Shall I write first?

"Puzzled."

It would be all right to write a friendly letter, Puzzled, and tell him you are expecting a letter. Your stationery—not stationary—is all right, dear, and your choice of words good. This was the only word misspelled and it a confusing one to many.

What is my opinion of a bashful young man? That is "A Reader's" first question. And if a young man shows by his actions that he thinks a lot of a girl and yet never asks her for a date, what is she to think? To answer your question first, "Reader," he is probably shy and can't bring himself to ask for a date—probably feels he would make a fool of himself taking a girl out. That's all right, but I think he should have strength of mind enough to overcome his bashfulness and ask her or tell her he's out of luck. I'd hint that he'd better spunk up, if I were you.

Can't you speak in a friendly way to your former boy friend, "Unsuccessful Frankie"? I think, too, that it would be better to be just friends than not to speak at all, since you cannot be sweet hearts.

he was a very nice looking sort of fellow, and it was plain to be seen at the first glance he was fond of color, for he wore a vest of bright red. And by this red vest Peter knew him at once for an old friend.

"Bless my feathers, if there isn't the boy! I am feeling fine, thank you, old chap. I just finished breakfasting on some woodberries—I found them under the snow, and they were delicious. Lovely

REASON FOR LINCOLN'S GREATNESS

Numerous speakers will be called on as usual on Lincoln's birthday, February 12, for thoughts on the career of that profound thinker. The day comes on Sunday, so ministers will be among those who may tell what they think his career means for our day.

It is commonly used as a means of comforting boys and girls who come from very humble homes. They are taught that this man ascended to belong to the great ones of earth, from a home which had less of conveniences than the humblest dwelling of today. Such a career proves that there is no bar to achievement in America.

The American people come very near accepting a man or woman for what he or she does. If the achievement of the person is of benefit to the community, one's lowly origin is forgotten. People will also cease to laugh at any awkwardness that such a one carries up from the early beginnings.

But when they are told this story, young people need to form an idea quite strongly. People do not rise to any kind of triumph without effort. Lincoln had very little schooling probably not more than a year altogether. But he had access to a number of the world's greatest literary masterpieces. He read his Bible and Shakespeare and American history until he knew them and the rest of his small library by heart, and had taken deeply into his thought the profound wisdom of these sources of inspiration.

If like the average boy of today, he had spent his spare time on superficial reading and ordinary entertainment, the world would never have heard of him. The person who aspires to a noteworthy career, must like Abraham Lincoln seek inspiration from the world's best minds. But one must also like Lincoln be a person of action and practical judgment, and learn how to apply one's wisdom skillfully to the problems of every day life.

KEEPING UP LINCOLN'S STANDARDS

John H. Bartlett, first assistant postmaster general, who, before he became a Federal official was governor of the state of New Hampshire, made a speech the other day at Dayton, at a McKinley banquet at which he discussed the tariff in a way that brought it closer to the people than has been done in some time.

Taking the tariff activities of President McKinley as a basis, he laid down that American prosperity and American living standards cannot be maintained on a scale 200 and 300 per cent higher than that of other nations without a protective tariff, and that American efficiency in production, marvelous as it is, cannot offset this difference.

"We should never lose sight," he said, "that high wages, good wages, must ever be the first and paramount consideration, and that a high civilization is always the hand-maid of high wages. Low prices in the necessities of life is paramount, but not of the first consideration, and wages secondary, then it follows that we admit free of duty in competition with ourselves the products of foreign farms and workshops."

Speaking of the free trade argument that we are paying too much for our food, Mr. Bartlett said that it was true that the American market could be largely supplied with the cheap land products of the Argentine, New Zealand and Canada; the cheap dairy products of Australia and Northern Europe; cheap fruit from Southern Europe and Central America and eggs from China, but, when that food comes in American raised food is not bought and if the American farmer is thus handicapped, how long can we expect him to carry on and continue the purchase of the 40 per cent of the product of the American industries which he now buys? "Ruin the farmers, and 40 per cent of the products of American industry are taken away, and hence 40 per cent of the American industrial laborers are put out of employment." On the reverse, he said if free trade on farmers' implements etcetera is allowed, the American workmen who manufacture those and who buy ninety per cent of the farmers' output, would be reduced to unemployment and their opportunity for purchasing the American farmers' supplies would be destroyed.

A little more talk along the Bartlett lines and less about gold balances is what the American people need for a real understanding of this problem.

BURTON RASCOE

My wife complains that she can get little work of any kind done at home, since the telephone solicitors have become so numerous and disturbing as those who ring the front doorbell. The phone rings at least once a day to hear the dulcet-voiced solicitor for magazine subscriptions, the charity worker, who has concert tickets to sell, the photographer's agent who wishes to make an appointment for a trial sitting, the electric company's man who thinks the Rascoe family is about due for a new vacuum cleaner, the dairy in New Rochelle, offering a special sale in butter and eggs, the automobile sales go-getter who tries to give us an inferiority complex about our well-worn bus. This list is typical, without invention or exaggeration. I have found the best way to shut the persistent caller off is by announcing I am just hot-footing it for a train. Which is almost invariably the truth.

My neighbor's maid was narrating the tale of how her West Indian cousin had landed a job in a French household in one of the nearby suburbs. Her cousin, she asserted proudly, spoke French fluently. "The old lady of the house," she said, "my cousin always calls ma-mame. But the young one she never speaks to without calling the funniest name—never heard such a thing. She calls her Madame Brazil." My wife repeated the odd name, mystified, once or twice before she figured out that this was Lucy's version of "mademoiselle."

I entered the sacred portals of the Union League club last week for the first time, the occasion being an exhibition of paintings by American artists. It was with a subdued air, a distant sense of intrusion, that I padded apologetically about in this sanctum of New York's most conservative. An attendant vouchsafed the information that the pictures had to be carted away by Saturday because the gentlemen wanted the room for their bridge game. And I had a vision of a score or more impatient gray bears, refusing to see any charm in Henry R. Rittenberg's exquisite "Nineteen," portrait of a girl, because they wanted the tables set up at once.

A young and doting father lured me into the shop called Childhood, Inc., in East Fifty-seventh street, last week, and called upon me to join him in his enthusiastic purchase of furniture for the room of his son, aged 2. It is possible, nowadays, to buy sturdy and tasteful appointments for a nursery. I decided, after an inspection of this shop's treasures. Small reproductions of good early American chairs and tables are on sale, in pine and maple, and they seem to me so far superior to the pink and white any-garlanded pieces of furniture displayed in the department stores that no comparison is possible.

THE DIFFICULT ART OF SPECULATION

One of the most agreeable things about the stock market is that one may sometimes prosper there by being logical. Or at any rate, chances for success are greatly enhanced by doing what seems to be logical. To follow mere obvious, surface logic is usually fatal.

Indeed to monkey with the stock market at all is illogical and unwise, in view of all stories one has heard since childhood about the foolhardiness of attempting to beat an unbeatable game. I'm inclined to think that speculation is generally regarded as not only dangerous, but downright wicked.

Profits from speculation are ill-gotten gains—because not won by the sweat of one's brow. Yet of course every conservative, successful manufacturer is a speculator. He speculates in raw materials when they're cheap—when the market is advantageous—at least part of the time, he'll finally go bankrupt. No matter how clever a salesman or advertiser, he couldn't win if he should always buy at top prices and sell finished products in a falling market. Even buying a home is speculation. Nobody would care to have a house on ground likely to drop in value, would he?

Maybe the very difficulty of speculation is what has brought it into disrepute. Most men who enter business eventually fall because of their inability to be successful buyers and sellers. Like most men who speculate in stocks lose all the money they have. Naturally, men who have failed in such an enterprise are in the majority—do not speak any too highly of it. Neither do those of us who have been unable to learn how to play golf mention the game in terms of highest praise. But the fact remains that an occasional man speculates—and speculates as a sole means of livelihood, and contrives to do it year after year. He may not become a multi-millionaire; if he did, he would no longer have to bother with speculation. But neither does he go broke, for in that event he couldn't longer speculate.

Since the problem of trying to make money by buying and selling stocks seems to interest most people, I am going to keep on talking about it in this little space to-morrow and maybe for a few days thereafter.

How to Achieve Beauty

A HOME BLEACHING TREATMENT

You may be surprised that I should talk to you about a bleaching treatment at this time of the year. However, it is just the time when women should be reminded of the bleaching measures that are usually thought of only at the end of summer. Many women do not think of them at all, except after they have been out in the sun and acquired a good coat of tan.

The truth is that many skins really need a little bleaching all the year around. They tend to get a yellowish cast, and this is especially true of the oily, sallow skin. Such a skin should be put through a bleaching regime at least once a month, and sometimes oftener. The daily use of an animating, skin-clearing cream is especially good to counteract this yellowing tendency in between bleaching.

Practically every woman needs to give her neck a little bleaching treatment during the winter, especially if she wears dark furs. Furs are very hard on the skin. They pick up dirt so easily and transfer it to one's neck, and they are only too likely to contain dyes which discolor the skin. In my mind, nothing looks so badly above a lovely evening gown as a discolored neck.

A good bleach for the neck is a half-and-half solution of peroxide in water. Lemon juice can also be used for this purpose in a one-to-three proportion with water. Both of these have drying qualities, and if used, should be counteracted with plenty of softening cream. I do not advise using them on the face. For your face and neck, you can use oatmeal and lemon in this manner. Make a little muslin bag and put a slice of lemon in the bottom of it. Then fill it with oat meal. Moisten it and rub it on the skin.

However, the simplest bleaching treatment is an adaptation of your regular basic beauty regime. Substitute for your regular cleansing cream one of the good bleaching creams, which can be purchased at the better stores. Then follow it with your animating, skin-clearing cream and the astringent or skin-toning lotion.

"My daughter, my sister-in-law and I have been following your book, 'Diet and Health,' with keen interest. I have lost 40 pounds and my sister-in-law 100 pounds. My problem is my daughter. She is 16 years old, five feet six and one-half inches tall, and two weeks ago weighed 154. For two past two weeks she has averaged about 300 calories daily, but has not lost on ounce. Last year I had her under a specialist's care, who said she had glandular trouble and gave her medication, but it did not have the desired effect. I know you may think she is not skittish, but I know positively that she is. My husband and relatives object to her dieting, but she may as well starve to death as to die worrying over her weight. Can you help us? Any charge will be willingly paid."

"Mrs. F.": First let me tell you that I am not in private practice in any way, Mrs. F., so I have no charge to make thank Allah! Any help that I can give you I will give gladly through the column.

Now you say I will think she is not skittish, but I know positively that she is. My husband and relatives object to her dieting, but she may as well starve to death as to die worrying over her weight. Can you help us? Any charge will be willingly paid.

Now it is possible, if she is on a very low diet, that her metabolism (chemistry of the body) is deranged and her tissues are holding an excess amount of water. I suggest that you have her go on 1000 calories a day, but be sure that her food is counted correctly and doesn't average more. Eliminate all salty foods and a large portion of her table salt, as salt helps to retain water. She must have a balanced diet—protein (growth food), which she needs in the form of three glasses of skim or buttermilk daily, or its equivalent in cheese, preferably cottage cheese, some meat, fish or eggs; and her full quota of vegetables and fruits. See that she does not overeat on certain days and so nullify the effects of dieting on days when she is on the reducing diet.

(The instructions given in my book we have in condensed form. Those of you who desire these may have our pamphlets by sending ten cents in coin—to cover the cost of printing and handling—and a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope, with request.)

"Late Marriages": M. asks me if I would advise a spinster of 55 years of age to marry.

"Why not, M.?" At 55 you ought still to be a young woman. I send you my question to a medical column, you probably want to know the health aspects of a marriage late in life, but as the health aspects of marriage may depend upon the heart aspects, I'll have to bring that phase in. If you love your man and he is free from communicable diseases, and if both of you realize that at your ages you are pretty well settled in your habits and probably won't brook any attempts to change them, there is no reason why you shouldn't marry.

Yes, M., marry and adopt a baby (better two). Naturally you won't have any of your own. There are agencies in every city that will put you in touch with babies and children that are in need of homes, and they send for our list of books on the care and feeding of children. (Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.)

Boil six eggs twenty minutes. Remove shells, and when cold cut into slices. Make sauce of one tablespoon butter, one of flour, one cup soup stock, one-half green pepper seeded and chopped, salt to taste. When sauce begins to thicken add eggs carefully without breaking, and serve.

I wouldn't write again to the boy if I were you. "Lonely Peggy" He must be the kind of person with whom "out of sight is out of mind." Don't feel badly, dear, another more worthy friend will come along, you may be sure.

Sorry you did not get an answer, "Broken Hearted and Blue." Possibly you were too frank about your love for the boy and it frightened him. He didn't want to be taken so seriously on such short acquaintance. You might drop him a note and tell him you miss him and would like him to call, but be more reserved next time. If he pays no attention to it, there is nothing you can do. Sorry I can't be more encouraging.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Trouble has been simmering for quite a while in the realm of weather prophecy.

Latest developments look like actual warfare.

We have two kinds of meteorologists in this country:

1. The official priesthood, recognized by the government as the weather bureau of the department of agriculture.

2. All others.

The official bunch has the strength of unity and powerful backing.

Serene in same, their policy, until just now, has been to pay little attention to heterodox prophetic activities—simply to pooh-pooh 'em.

Unofficial meteorology has been scattered.

It hasn't lacked a fiery candidate for leadership—Herbert Janvrin Browne, long-range forecaster of rising reputation. The weather bureau says his forecasts are all bunkum, but his reputation for 'em's been rising, anyway.

However, Browne's following wouldn't follow.

Why Browne couldn't get any action isn't so hard to understand, when you consider the kind of folks he's affiliated with.

There's Dr. Charles G. Abbot, on whose discoveries concerning solar radiation Browne, to a great extent, bases his predictions—but Dr. Abbot's primarily interested in color radiation and only incidentally in the weather.

There's the naval hydrographic office, which deals with ocean currents, and we've all heard what an effect they have on climate—but the hydrographic office hates to get into a row with the weather bureau.

There are the various aviation services, but they're young and unaggressive yet.

There's Prof. H. H. Clayton, recognized by the weather bureau itself as one of the world's foremost meteorologists, though he considers him wrong on the long-distance proposition—but he's a mild old scientist, who wouldn't quarrel with a rabbit.

There are the Argentine and Chilean and Australian and several other foreign weather departments—but they're away 'way off, and Browne can't bring 'em here to testify.

There are also some heretics in our own weather bureau—but they talk in whispers.

As to Browne, he doesn't lay claim to much scientific knowledge—merely says he has business reasons for wanting to foretell weather farther ahead than the weather bureau foretells it.

However, he offers enough expert evidence, to the effect that it can be done, to make the average layman stop, look and listen.

At all events, he got the bureau's goat the other day to the extent of extracting from Chief Marvin a statement denouncing the Browne system of weather prophecy in middling strong language.

That was what Browne's been waiting for.

An investigation was what he craved, and Chairman Charles L. McNary of the senate committee on agriculture—the weather bureau, take note, is an adjunct of the department of agriculture—wasn't long in hearing from him to that effect.

After all, nearly everybody's interested in the weather.

If McNary can see his way clear to granting this "probe," it can be guaranteed to draw crowds that an oil hearing never dreamt of. Incidentally, it may reveal a lot of things that any number of people would like to know about the weather.

SAUCE FOR THE GANDER

"What's the sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander," so they say. If your boy friend steps out and the girls about it, try a bit of "stepping" yourself. It may show him that it is not so cute an act as he thought. That's what one little girl did, but she's not quite sure she did right.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl of 16, and have been going to school with a boy and have grown very fond of him. He says he loves me, but doesn't act much like it. He told me if I did not go with other boys he would not go with other girls. I told him I wouldn't, and have kept my promise, but he hasn't. He would go to see another girl and tell me a big story. Last night I had a date with him and he called me up and said he had to go off. Since he wasn't coming I thought I would go out. When I reached the place, the first person I saw there was him. Please advise me, what to do. Just Pal."

You did just right, Pal, and I'd give him to understand that as long as he isn't playing fair you will take back your promise. You are both too young to keep "steady company" anyway. Have a good time with all your friends.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: My boy friend went to another town to work. He has been gone two weeks and hasn't written yet. I believe he is too bashful to write as he stopped with a year's less schooling than I had, he may not think he can write a good letter. Shall I write first?

It would be all right to write a friendly letter, Puzzled, and tell him you are expecting a letter. Your stationery—not stationary—is all right, dear, and your choice of words good. This was the only word misspelled and it a confusing one to many.

What is my opinion of a bashful young man? That is "A Reader's" first question. And if a young man shows by his actions that he thinks a lot of a girl and yet never asks her for a date, is she to think? To answer your last question first, "Reader," he is probably shy and can't bring himself to ask for a date—probably feels he would make a fool of himself taking a girl out. That's all right, but I think he should overcome his bashfulness and ask her or he'll "just be out of luck." I'd hint that he'd better spunk up, if I were you.

Can't you speak in a friendly way to your former boy friend, "Unsuccessful Frankie"? I think, if you would be better to be just friends than not to speak at all, since you cannot be sweethearts.

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

THE FAT GENTLEMAN WITH A RED VEST

At last Peter thought the cat had been punished enough, and he was trying to think of a way to help him when he noticed that Whittie seemed to be increasing his speed and making for the old stone wall that edged the field.

"I bet anything that he is going to run as close to the stones as he can," cried the boy, aloud. "Probably he thinks that the birds, unable to escape their course very much as they dip toward the ground, will hit the stones before they can touch him. Clever old cat! I thought so! That is exactly what he is doing. And he twisted about in his tracks so subtly that the birds never caught on to what he was up to."

Pain and fright must have lent strength to the feet of Whittie, for now he was speeding over the snow like a streak and making straight for the stone wall.

Sure enough, as Peter had guessed, Whittie screeched himself tightly against the wall and started for the barn. And how he did run! Peter was sure that never had he seen an animal make such speed! It was not long before Whittie was lost to sight in the snow. But the birds' bright eyes could still see the cat's black spot, but it was not distinguishable to human sight.

The crows, maddened at the thought that their prey was getting away from them, were cawing fiercely and flapping their wings and gave chase as best they could. Once more the boy was left to his own devices. Peter was wondering just what to do next when something happened that made him clap his hands for joy.

There, perched upon a bush not five feet away from him, was a fat gentleman in a gray coat. Such a funny, merry face as this fat gentleman had! His chin was white, and his mouth was yellow and he had quizzical spots under his eyes. But somehow, in spite of all this, he was a very nice looking sort of fellow, and it was plain to be seen at the first glance he was fond of color, for he wore a vest of bright red. And by this red vest Peter knew him at once for an old friend.

"Good morning, Robin Redbreast," cried Peter, rushing forward to the bird. "You are a sight for sore eyes. How are you this frosty morning?"

"Bless my feathers, if there isn't the boy! I am feeling fine, thank you, old chap. I just finished breakfast on some woodberries and found them under the snow, and they were delicious. Lovely day, isn't it? A trifle cold perhaps, but who cares for that? Snow and sleet only make us appreciate the summer all the more, I say. I rather like frosty weather myself, and I comfort myself for the loss of all those friends that fly away when the first chill comes by thinking what a great reunion we will have when they come flying back."

"Brave old Robin! Making the best of things and as cheery as ever, I see!" cried Peter. "I heard you singing to your mate yesterday. It sounded as if you were as happy as could be, in spite of the snowflakes that were falling back."

PERCHED UPON A BUSH WAS A FAT GENTLEMAN WHO WORE A RED VEST

How's This, Gang? Central Crushes Middletown

LAST HALF RALLY HELPS XENIA CAGERS SMACK VISITORS 28-24

Locals Trail At Half 16 To 10 But Let Middies Have Only One Field Goal In Second—Play Eaton Saturday

By PHIL FRAME
TAGING its customary brilliant rally in the second half, Central High School came from behind to win its sixth straight game by downing Middletown High School 28 to 24 in an exceptionally fast and rough basketball game Friday night at Central gymnasium.

Only through a desperate third quarter rally did the Blue and White quintet earn its victory. At the half the Middies were ahead 16 to 10, but rallying strong, Xenia knotted the count and then took the lead by virtue of a spurt in the third period.

Coach Kolb uncovered a new wrinkle when he started what virtually amounted to his second team and the reserves performed capably, holding the visitors to a 9 to 8 score in the opening period.

With the regular team on the ground, the Middies put up a strong defense and led 16 to 10 at the half. In the third period Xenia came back strong to outscore Middletown 15 to 5 and lead 25 to 21 at the end of the quarter. The locals fought desperately to hold the small advantage and the final score was played evenly, each team scoring three points.

The game was characterized by the calling of thirty-two personal fouls, fifteen on Xenia and seventeen on Middletown. Xenia shot well from the foul line, making twelve in seventeen attempts. Inability to turn fouls into points was a factor in the defeat. In the second quarter Xenia's offense failed to function properly and the passwork was faulty. Moon shot a foul, Gibney did likewise and the Middle pivot-man repeated with a charity shot. Morton came through with a foul and Moon sank a short shot. Teckmeyer made a foul and James a long fielder as the gun cracked at the half.

The third period was a breath-taking affair. James opened it by shooting a foul. Then Captain Clemans turned in a foul and Morton two more free throws. Teckmeyer also made a point from the foul line as did Doak. For a change, Gibney looped in a pretty fielder. Carmody shot a foul and then came the turning point of the game.

With his team trailing by three points, Higgins, the long-shot artist of the Blue and White, dropped in two straight fielders from the center of the floor to give the crowd hysterics and put Xenia one point ahead.

Moon counted a basket but Xenia now was within striking distance and quickly tied the score on Gibney's foul. The Blue and White then went into the lead again on baskets by Buell and Doak as the quarter ended.

Both teams were considerably weakened in the final period due to the ejection of players on personal fouls. Moon, center, and Barker, guard, went out for the Middies, while Captain Clemans was banished for Xenia.

Xenia fought a heady defensive game the closing stanza, freezing the ball and otherwise playing for time with great success. Xenia's scoring efforts were rewarded by a fielder by Morton and Doak's foul. The Middies were held to three fouls, one by Butterfield and two by Teckmeyer.

In fact Xenia's defense was so improved in the last half that Middletown registered only one field goal. In memory serves correctly it has been at least seven years since Xenia defeated Middletown in basketball and the victory was sweet revenge for the 40 to 17 defeat last year after Xenia had won nine straight games.

Friday night's game produced a new offensive star in the person of Gibney, guard, who scored eight points in addition to playing a fast floor game. Doak and Morton were closely watched, the former making seven points and the latter five. Higgins also made five points and his two long shots were inserted at the time when they were most needed.

Captain Teckmeyer was high-point man of the game with eleven markers but after the first quarter, was so closely guarded that he failed to score a field goal. Central's defense was such that the visitors were forced to resort to long shots with indifferent results. Moon made six points and greatly aided the Middies by getting the tip off.

EX-OHIO WESLEYAN STAR TEAM-MATES TO PLAY HERE MONDAY

VIC KOLB

Victor Kolb and "Bill" LeSourd, both former Ohio Wesleyan University basketball stars, form the nucleus of the newly-organized Downtown Country Club court team, which will bid for victory in its opening game of the season against the Cedarville College "Yellow-Jackets" Monday night at Central High School gym.

This contest will give local fans an opportunity to watch Kolb perform for the first time locally since he became coach of Central High School athletics three years ago.

Both LeSourd and Kolb played on the Wesleyan team for three years. LeSourd served one year as captain but was handicapped by an injured knee. He always played at forward and was known for his scrappy floor work in addition to his basket shooting ability. His specialty was slipping away from opposing guards and dribbling his way up the floor through the defense.

Kolb played forward for three years at about the same time, but struck his real pace in his senior year when he was shifted to guard. During the 1924-25 season, Kolb was high scorer of the Ohio Conference, even though he was playing at guard, and was practically the unanimous choice of Ohio sport-writers as an All-Ohio guard.

In his senior year Kolb was conceded to be one of the most spectacular guards ever to represent the university on the basketball floor. His work, when in his left eye in the fourth round and in a head-on collision in the fifth, McKinley's forehead was gashed. Partly blinded and wiping the blood away with both gloves as he backed away from Lomski's rushes, McKinley rallied and ripped the flesh under Lomski's right eye with a left hook. Both were bleeding freely when the round ended.

Monday night's game will be preceded by a good preliminary starting at 7:30 o'clock.

BOWERSVILLE HIGH DIVIDES TWO GAMES AT YELLOW SPRINGS

Yellow Springs and Bowersville High School boys and girls' basketball teams split a double-header at Yellow Springs Friday night.

Yellow Springs boys defeated the visiting quintet 33 to 12 without difficulty after Bowersville girls' sextet had managed to beat Yellow Springs girls 19 to 16 in the preliminary.

Yellow Springs boys were ahead 19 to 3 at the half. Snyder and Smith starred at forwards, Sprinkle played a good game at center five. Higgins also made five points and his two long shots were inserted at the time when they were most needed.

Captain Teckmeyer was high-point man of the game with eleven markers but after the first quarter, was so closely guarded that he failed to score a field goal. FAMOUS AUTO FIVE WILL PLAY DAYTON CHRYSLERS WEDNESDAY

The Famous Auto Five basketball team hopes to add the Dayton Chrysler to its rapidly-mounting list of victims in a game scheduled for next Wednesday night, February 8 at Central High School gymnasium.

The Xenia Independent team has yet to taste defeat on its home floor and the quintet is piling up bigger and better margins of victory in each succeeding game.

The Chrysler represent one of Dayton's crack basketball teams. This aggregation at present is conceded in first place in the Commercial League, having recently

M'KINLEY 5B QUINTET WINS GRADE LEAGUE COURT BATTLE

The sixth and final round of the second annual Intra-City Grade School Basketball League produced the McKinley 5B quintet as the winner of the fifth grade championship, Saturday morning at Central High gym.

Spring Hill fourth and sixth grade teams had previously won the championship of their own grades without the loss of a game in four played.

McKinley 5B emerged winner in its grade by defeating the McKinley 5A team 12 to 9 in what proved to be the deciding contest. The "B" team finished its schedule with three victories and one defeat, while Spring Hill was second with two games won and two lost.

Both McKinley teams played well. Batson was the star for the winners, contributing ten points to his team's total. Latimer was high-point man for the losers with six points. Stiles also played a good floor game for the "A" team.

In the opening contest of the round, McKinley 4B sustained its fourth straight defeat by a shutout, McKinley 4A winning 2 to 0, by almost the smallest possible score, more like a baseball game. McKinley 4B has played four games without scoring a point, setting some-thing of a record. Jones shot the only basket of the game. Conner looked best for the losers.

In the third game of the morning, McKinley 6B, the 1926-27 grade champions of the city, defeated McKinley 6A for the second time. The score was 17 to 6. Because of an insufficient number of players on the "B" team, Batson played with the champs and was largely responsible for the victory, scoring fifteen points. Bauman starred for the losers with six points.

The elimination series prior to the final game to decide the city championship will be played Saturday morning, February 11.

JUNIOR HIGH BEATS BELLBROOK JUNIOR HIGH OUTFIT 20-4

Putting up an airtight defense, the Central Junior High basketball team defeated the Bellbrook Juniors 20 to 4 in a one-sided game, played as a preliminary to the Xenia-Middletown contest, Friday night at the local gym.

Central Juniors held the visitors scoreless the first half, when ended in favor of Coach Glen Patterson's team 10 to 0.

Thompson was steady as usual on defense while King and Ringler gathered in eighteen of their team's twenty points.

For Bellbrook, Barten, lanky pivot-man, played a good game and shot a basket. The last quarter produced a stream of Central substitutes with Flory playing a leading role and caging a neat basket as the final whistle sounded.

Lineups follow: Bellbrook (4) Central Jr. (20) Peterson, Ringer, Creamer, Barten, Coffelt, Block, Thompson, King, Ringler, Flory, Hunter, Referee—Fred Sekyra.

Red Sox and finally moved out of the majors—to the Pacific Coast. He even drifted into the outfield. Then the Cubs tried him—only to send him back.

Last year, as a member of the Los Angeles club, he played so brilliantly and rendered such yeoman service in various ways that he was chosen as the most valuable player to his team in the coast circuit.

Now he comes back to the majors, to play his field for the New York Giants the coming season. Manager McGraw will turn the left garden over to him when the team lines up at Augusta, Ga.

"This is my big chance," thought Chaplin. And he took it. The Yanks failed to score a single run off his delivery. Even Ruth was helpless at the plate.

The Giant clerical force beat the others to him with pen and contract. He won his first fame as a pitcher with the University of Florida, and is a resident of that state.

Sam West, the young outfielder recalled by the Washington Senators from Birmingham last fall, is destined to take Tris Speaker's place in center field—if he can hit big league pitching effectively.

Apparently, he already has an arm like the one that made the Texas Eagle famous for "throwing strikes from the outfield."

In one exhibition game against the Giants last year this young dapper killed off two runners at the plate with perfect pegs.

Were you to ask Mr. Frank "Lefty" O'Doul to define baseball he probably would clear up the matter by remarking: "This is a queer business."

Some six years ago O'Doul joined the New York Yankees down south for a tryout as a left-handed pitcher. He had a wide, sweeping curve and some idea how to use it. But the plate proved too elusive. As a result when the Yankees plunged into a series of pennant-winning years, O'Doul found himself out of the running. He was shunted to the

ST. BRIGID EASILY BEATS LION TAMERS

St. Brigid High School's basketball team, with a number of regulars missing from the lineup, piled up such a commanding lead in the first half that it could afford to rest the last two periods and still nose out the East High Lion Tamers 16 to 15 Friday night at the East High gym.

At the end of the opening half, the visitors were leading 14 to 3. In the second half the Lion Tamers rallied but their come-back fell one point short of a possible tie.

How's This, Gang? Central Crushes Middletown

LAST HALF RALLY HELPS XENIA CAGERS SMACK VISITORS 28-24

Locals Trail At Half 16 To 10 But Let Middies Have Only One Field Goal In Second—Play Eaton Saturday

By PHIL FRAME
TAGGING its customary brilliant rally in the second half, Central High School came from behind to win its sixth straight game by downing Middletown High School 28 to 24 in an exceptionally fast and rough basketball game after the visitors had led most of the way Friday night at Central gymnasium.

Only through a desperate third quarter rally did the Blue and White quintet earn its victory. At the half the Middies were ahead 16 to 10, but rallying strong, Xenia knotted the count and then took the lead by virtue of a spurt in the third period.

Coach Kolb uncovered a new wrinkle when he started what virtually amounted to his second team and the reserves performed capably, holding the visitors to a 9 to 8 score the opening period.

With the regular team on the floor, the Middies put up a strong defense and led 16 to 10 at the half. In the third period Xenia came back strong to outscore Middletown 15 to 5 and lead 25 to 21 at the end of the quarter. The locals fought desperately to hold the small advantage and the final session was played evenly, each team scoring three points.

The game was characterized by the calling of thirty-two personal fouls, fifteen on Xenia and seventeen on Middletown. Xenia shot well from the foul line, making twelve in seventeen attempts. Inability to turn fouls into points

Boys' Team Battles Uphill Game To Take Victory

After trailing most of the game, Beaver Creek High School came from behind to nose out Spring Valley High School 27 to 25 in an exciting basketball game on the Springfield floor Friday night. The victory came as something of a surprise as Spring Valley is conceded to have an unusually strong team this season. Beaver fought a magnificent uphill battle to accomplish the victory.

Spring Valley led until the last three minutes of play when the visitors forged ahead. Beaver was down 15 to 11 at the half.

Davis and Conrad shared individual scoring honors for Beaver, each making eight points. Smith led the Spring Valley offensive with the same number.

In the preliminary, the strong Beaver girls' sextet downed Spring Valley females 29 to 18, winning an easy victory. Moon scored sixteen points and her running mate, H. Bailey, thirteen. Smith led the losers with eight counters.

Spring Valley boys play Wayneville High on the latter's floor Saturday night. Next Friday night the Valley boys' and girls' teams play the strong Centerville teams at Centerville. WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The senate's Teapot Dome inquiry today unearthed the disposition of $800,000 of the Continental Trading Company's $3,950,000 liberty bond fund.

W. S. Fitzpatrick, chairman of the board of the Prairie Oil and Gas Company, told the public lands committee that James E. O'Neill, who since fled to Europe, had paid $800,000 of the bonds into the Prairie's treasury. Fitzpatrick said O'Neill described the bonds as a part of the Continental Company's "profits."

EX-OHIO WESLEYAN STAR TEAM-MATES TO PLAY HERE MONDAY

VIC KOLB

Victor Kolb and "Bill" LeSourd, both former Ohio Wesleyan University basketball stars, form the nucleus of the newly-organized Downtown Country Club court team, which will bid for victory in its opening game of the season against the Cedarville College "Yellow-Jackets" Monday night at Central High School gym.

This contest will give local fans an opportunity to watch Kolb perform for the first time locally since he became coach of Central High School athletics three years ago. Both LeSourd and Kolb played on the Wesleyan team for three years. LeSourd served one year as captain but was handicapped by an injured knee. He always played at his best and was known for his scrappy floor work in addition to his basket shooting ability. His specialty was slipping away from opposing guards and dribbling the way up the floor through the defense.

Kolb played forward for three years at about the same time, but struck his real pace in his senior year when he was shifted to guard. During the 1924-25 season, Kolb was high scorer of the Ohio Conference even though he was playing at guard, and was practically the unanimous choice of Ohio sport-writers as an All-Ohio guard.

In his senior year Kolb was conceded to be one of the most spectacular guards ever to represent the university on the basketball floor. His work, when in his last year, combined dazzling floor work with utterly uncanny ability to sink baskets from the very center of the floor and from practically any angle.

Monday night's game will be preceded by a good preliminary starting at 7:30 o'clock.

BOWERSVILLE HIGH DIVIDES TWO GAMES AT YELLOW SPRINGS

Yellow Boys Win But Girls Lose In Twin Bill.

Yellow Springs and Bowersville High School boys' and girls' basketball teams split a double-header at Yellow Springs Friday night. Yellow Springs boys defeated the visiting quintet 33 to 12 with out difficulty after Bowersville girls' sextet had managed to beat Yellow Springs girls 19 to 16 in the preliminary.

Yellow Springs boys were ahead 19 to 3 at the half. Snyder and Smith starred at forwards, center played a good game at center, and the fine defensive play of Acton and Furay at guards for Yellow Springs also stood out. Hargrave was the star of the visiting quintet.

In the girls' preliminary, Bowersville piled up a commanding lead in the first half and was ahead 19 to 5 at the half-way point. Yellow Springs rallied in the final half and scored eleven points while holding Bowersville scoreless. The great reversal of form fell three points short of knotting the score.

PART OF MYSTERY PUZZLED BY LOVE, GIRL SHOTS SELF

GALLON, O., Feb. 4.—Miss Helen Neville, 27, died here today of a self-inflicted bullet wound in her head. The young woman is said to have shot herself Jan. 19, when confronted by two Gallon suitors. Miss Neville was preparing to elope with one of the men, police were told, when the other appeared at her home. A few minutes after the girl excused herself, the young man said, a shot was heard and Miss Neville was found unconscious.

FAMOUS AUTO FIVE WILL PLAY DAYTON CHRYSLERS WEDNESDAY

The Famous Auto Five basketball team hopes to add the Dayton Chrysler's to its rapidly-mounting list of victims in a game scheduled for next Wednesday night, February 8 at Central High School gymnasium.

The Xenia Independent team has yet to taste defeat on its home floor and the quintet is piling up bigger and better margins of victory in each succeeding game.

The Chrysler's represent one of Dayton's crack basketball teams. This aggregation at present is esteemed in first place in the Commercial League, having recently wrested the loop leadership from the Kelly Kubs, a team that was recently beaten by the Famous Auto Five.

Xenia was pushed to the limit to defeat the Kubs 63 to 52 in a game here several weeks ago and can therefore readily be seen that the Xenia-Chrysler battle should be an interesting one with a close score prevailing.

The Famous Auto bunch has been reinforced by the signing of new players and has high hopes for an undefeated season.

The game will be preceded by an interesting preliminary.

M'KINLEY 5 B QUINTET WINS GRADE LEAGUE COURT BATTLE

The sixth and final round of the second annual Intra-City Grade School basketball League produced the McKinley 5B quintet as the winner of the fifth grade championship, Saturday morning at Central High gym.

Spring Hill fourth and sixth grade teams had previously won the championship of their own grades without the loss of a game in the preliminary rounds.

McKinley 5B emerged winner in its grade by defeating the McKinley 5A team 12 to 9 in what proved to be the deciding game. The "B" team finished its schedule with three victories and one defeat, while Spring Hill was second with two games won and two lost.

Both McKinley teams played well. Watson was the star for the winners, contributing ten points to his team's total. Latimer was high-point man for the losers with six points. Stiles also played a good floor game for the "A" team.

In the opening contest of the round, McKinley 4B sustained its fourth straight defeat by a shutout, McKinley 4A winning 2 to 0, by almost the smallest possible score, more like a baseball game. McKinley 4B has played four games with out scoring a point, setting something of a record. Jones shot the only basket of the game. Conner looked best for the losers.

In the third game of the morning, McKinley 6B, the 1926-27 grade champions of the city, defeated McKinley 6A for the second time. The score was 17 to 4. Because of an insufficient number of players on the "B" team, Watson played with the champs and was largely responsible for the victory, scoring fifteen points. Bauman starred for the losers with six points.

The elimination series prior to the final game to decide the city championship will be played Saturday morning, February 11.

The former light heavyweight champion had many of the motions but hardly a flash of the old spectacular guard ever to represent the university on the basketball floor. He was only a shell last night and it is not conceivable that he will endure many more beatings before he announces he is through.

The old boy couldn't carry a round against Lomski. He fiddled for three rounds to conserve his energy and then found he couldn't handle the blond youngster with his best shots.

It was a bloody encounter. Lomski suffered a cut in the corner of his left eye in the fourth round and in a head-on collision in the fifth McKie's forehead was gashed. Partly blinded and wiping the blood away with both gloves as he backed away from Lomski's rushes, McKie rallied and ripped the flesh under Lomski's right eye with a left hook. Both were bleeding freely when the round ended. Lomski battered the veteran and in the fourth round but Mike held his own in the fifth. That was his last spurt until the closing minute of the tenth round when he traded rights with Lomski and sent the youngster spinning a couple of times.

It was only by dint of much holding, scuffling, blocking and tying his man up in the clinches that McKie went the limit. It was apparent that Lomski spared him the ignominy of a knockout.

Lomski will be matched with either Jimmy Slattery or Joe Sekyra.

Central Jr. (20) Peterson.....Ringer Hopkins.....Creamer Barten.....Coffelt Block.....Thompson McHenry.....King Substitutions: Xenia—Baldner for Creamer; Smith for Baldner; Flory for Ringer; Hunter for Coffelt; Falls for King. Referee—Fred Smith.

Sports Done Brown

By NORMAN E. BROWN
Jimmy Chaplin, the young pitcher, signed by the Giants for at least a thorough tryout this spring, may thank the Yanks for his chance.

Jimmy had drawn little attention except in International league circles when the New York Yankees and Jersey City met in an exhibition game last fall.

Up to that time, Ruth, Gehrig & Co., had slaughtered all opposition pitchers. Only once had they been shut out.

Chaplin was well aware, of course, of the hitting propensities of the Huggins when he tackled them. "This is my big chance," thought Chaplin. And he took it.

The Yanks failed to score a single run off his delivery. Even Ruth was helpless at the plate.

The Giant clerical force beat the others to him with pen and contract.

He won his first fame as a pitcher with the University of Florida, and is a resident of that state.

Sam West, the young outfielder recalled by the Washington Senators from Birmingham last fall, is destined to take Tris Speaker's place in center field. He can hit big league pitching effectively.

Apparently, he already has an arm like the one that made the Texas Eagle famous for "throwing strikes from the outfield."

In one exhibition game against the Giants last year this young guarder killed off two runners at the plate with perfect pegs.

Were you to ask Mr. Frank "Lefty" O'Doul to define baseball he probably would clear up the matter by remarking: "It's a queer business."

Some six years ago O'Doul joined the New York Yankees down south at her home. A few minutes after the girl excused herself, the young man said, a shot was heard and Miss Neville was found unconscious.

She was the daughter of the late Dr. L. H. Neville, Gallon. Her mother survives.

ST. BRIGID EASILY BEATS LION TAMERS

St. Brigid High School's basketball team, with a number of regulars missing from the lineup, piled up such a commanding lead in the first half that it could fall in the last two periods and still nose out the East High Lion Tamers 16 to 15 Friday night at the East High gym.

At the end of the opening half, the visitors were leading 14 to 3. In the second half the Lion Tamers rallied but their come-back fell one point short of a possible tie.

LEGAL NOTICE
Pauline Atkinson, Russell Schroeder, Eureka, Kansas, Catherine Krieger, Frederick Krieger, Edward Krieger, of Covington, Kentucky, will take notice that on the 27th day of January, 1928, the plaintiff filed his petition against the estate of Jacob Shaffer, deceased, in the Court of Common Pleas of Greene County, Ohio, the same being cause No. 18017, in said Court for the true construction of the will of said Jacob Shaffer as to the power of the executor under said will to sell real estate. The description of said real estate follows:

Situate within the village limits of Yellow Springs, Greene County, Ohio, and being:

Parcel 1, Lots 142 and 143, improved with frame dwelling, appraised in inventory at $1,500.00.
Parcel 2, Lots 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182 and 183 improved with frame dwelling, appraised in inventory at $2,000.00.
Parcel 3, Lots 260, 261 and 262, improved with frame dwelling, appraised in inventory at $1,000.00.
Parcel 4, Lots 263, 264 and 265, improved with frame dwelling, appraised in inventory at $800.00.

That the prayer of said petition is for the judgment and decree of the court in regard to the true construction of said will, and if the court construes said will to mean that plaintiff has power of sale of real estate to pay debts, expenses of administration, maintenance and support of widow and bequest, though there be personal property which might be subject to payment of said debts, the court further make a finding that it is advisable to sell parcel Four (4) of said real estate, said defendants are required to answer said petition on the 31st day of March, 1928, or judgment will be taken against them.

MANY AT MEETING
More people attended the annual meeting of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, and more interest was shown in the organization and its work this year than at any time in the history of the organization, said delegates from this county on their return from Columbus. Those attending the meeting as delegates from the Greene County Farm Bureau held on January 30 and 31, 1928, were David C. Bradefute and Wm. W. Anderson.

Confidence in the work of the organization was expressed by delegates, members and directors when they returned the same officers, President L. B. Palmer of Pataskala, Vice President M. D. O'Farrell of Bucyrus, Secretary M. D. Lincoln of Columbus and Treasurer Perry L. Green of Hiram, to their posts. Changes in the constitution, ordered by the delegate body, place President Palmer in charge of the educational and organization work of the state farm bureau and Secretary Lincoln in charge of economic activities. A new office, that of chairman of the board of directors, was created and O. J. Bailey of Tacoma named to fill it.

Every problem of organized agriculture was touched on during the two days of the meeting, according to those from here who attended. As outlined in the resolutions farmers of Ohio favor increased application for the eradication of bovine tuberculosis, revision of the tariff for adequate protection to agriculture, compensation for corn over clean-up and the easiest possible regulations consistent with effective control.

The farm bureau's stand on national legislation was re-affirmed and included flood control, reforestation, adequate appropriation for extension work in agriculture, home economics, and boys' and girls' club work, truth in fabric, and adequate appropriation for research in agriculture.

In state matters the bureau favored state highway police, and opposed old age pensions, abutting property assessments on intercounty highways, and an open taxation amendment to the state constitution. Delegates also urged strengthening of the federal copyright, marketing act, and favored a thorough investigation of rural electrification.

The World And All

AT EASE
Life is the pleasantest adventure I know anything about. It is simply perfect. The world we live in may not be the best of all possible worlds, but I can't see how it could be improved upon, as a whole.

There is such variety! Now, for instance, people I wish you would look at people a while, and let me know if you do not find them interesting. I confess that I am so completely absorbed in contemplation of the interestingness of people that I have but little time for the important things, such as making money and going to parties.

I know a man who is forever lying about his friends. His friends individually and collectively, are the greatest fellows in the world. He will tell you the quaintest tales of the wonderful wit of this one and the unbridled genius of that one. I have never heard him say an ill word of anybody. He just loves to celebrate his friends. He never offers to push himself forward. He's just a friend of so-and-so's, and if he occupies a seat or a certain amount of space in the world, it's only because people know his friends. Now, how could you help liking such a chap, even though you know he's a liar?

Just stand at ease and look this remarkable world over once in a while. Stand, for instance, beside some reasonably steady river.

er that has been in business for a number of years. Choose a quiet, deep river, if possible. The river is going to sea. Oh, in no great hurry, to be sure, but it is going to the sea. There will be rocks and more or less evaporation, and sometimes foolish heavers will try to make the river stop somewhere. But the river, I think, will go on, serenely enough, and eventually it will reach the sea.

After watching the river a while, you can return to your work with a greater capacity for appreciating life. You will observe that the happiest individuals are those who resemble the river. They go their way serenely.

Really, what we need most in our present world is not faster airplanes and bigger steamships, so much as serenity.

In the city it is a little difficult to find individuals who are like the river. In the city there is apt to be worry about climbing up on tall towers and shouting, so that one may be observed of the multitude. The river, of course, doesn't care whether it is observed or not. It is going to the sea, and—well, it is just going to the sea. In rural places and in small towns one finds individuals who live like great rivers. And it is possible, for anyone, anywhere, even in prison or in a hospital, to live that way. For life, like the Kingdom of God, is within you.

SETTLES CLAIM FOR $300 AGAINST RAIL COMPANY IN COURT

Clyde Sanderson, as administrator of the estate of Nellie D. Gill, deceased, has been authorized in Probate Court, to accept an offer of $300 from the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Co., as full settlement of a claim for damages as a result of the death of the decedent December 26, 1927 when an auto in which she was a passenger, was struck by a B. and O. train at the Reesville, O., crossing.

Inasmuch as certain debts of the decedent remain unpaid, and since the amount received from the railroad company will constitute the entire assets of the estate the court ordered the administrator to pay all debts and the cost of administration upon receipt of the money.

The administrator was also instructed to make a report to the court of the balance remaining, if any, for the court to determine the final distribution.

COURT ORDERS SALE OF REAL PROPERTY

Sale of real estate at public auction has been ordered in the case of Douglas Marshall against Alpharette Marshall and others in Common Pleas Court. The court approved appraisal of property at $2,750, but decided partition could not be made.

DAMAGE ACTION DISMISSED
The $50,000 damage suit of Margaret Hook as administrator of the estate of William P. Hoog, deceased, against The Pennsylvania Railroad Co., has been ordered dismissed in Common Pleas Court since the claim for damages for the death set up in the petition has been settled with authority of Probate Court.

MAN ARRESTED FOR BOND JUMPING IS RETURNED TO IOWA

Charles Lovelough, 30, Perry St., Dayton, wanted in Waterloo, Ia., for bond jumping, was en route to that city Saturday in the custody of a Waterloo deputy sheriff.

Armed with a warrant for his arrest, the deputy arrived in Xenia Saturday morning. Lovelough was taken from the County Jail, was shown the warrant and offered no opposition to being returned to the Iowa city.

County authorities had been considering whether extradition proceedings would be necessary in the event Lovelough attempted to fight his removal to the western state.

Lovelough has been a fugitive from justice since early in January and was finally located in Dayton by Sheriff Ohmer Tate Thursday.

County authorities at the sheriff's request and brought to Xenia. Lovelough is alleged to have jumped a $500 appearance bond at Waterloo after having been arrested on a charge of manufacturing liquor.

is going to the sea. There will be rocks and more or less evaporation, and sometimes foolish heavers will try to make the river stop somewhere. But the river, I think, will go on, serenely enough, and eventually it will reach the sea.After watching the river a while, you can return to your work with a greater capacity for appreciating life. You will observe that the happiest individuals are those who resemble the river. They go their way serenely.Really, what we need most in our present world is not faster airplanes and bigger steamships, so much as serenity.In the city it is a little difficult to find individuals who are like the river. In the city there is apt to be worry about climbing up on tall towers and shouting, so that one may be observed of the multitude.
The river, of course, doesn't care whether it is observed or not. It is going to the sea, and well, it is just going to the sea. In rural places and in small towns one finds individuals who live like great rivers. And it is possible, for anyone, anywhere, even in prison or in a hospital, to live that way. For life, like the Kingdom of God, is within you.

Jill Justin, ultra-modern and as lambently lovely at 20 as the Saga Lily, starts out on a moon-lit night in August, accompanied by her brother Tony, to attend a harvest festival.

The two run into an automobile hold-up. Jill is kidnapped by bandits, who carry her into the hills, from where she is rescued by Jack Stuart, who takes her home.

It is the old story retold. Jack stays for a visit and remains to wed the lovely Jill. The passing of two years finds them the proud and happy parents of twin boys and a girl.

Now transpires an event destined to bring about radical changes in the lives of these people. Wandering through the hills back of the Justin home, Stuart stumbles onto an old abandoned mine. He also discovers what he believes to be ore-bearing rock.

It is Tony, however, in the following April, who brings in the big news. He is inveigled into the hills by a pretty girl, who tells him her name is Mary, but that she is "called Mike!" Mary, who is called "Mike" is driving a costly roadster, and she asks Tony to guide her to a place in the hills known as The Devil's Luck. Here she takes the lead and pilots him into an electrically lighted chamber. After telling him that his and Stuart's tax title mine yields an ore rich in tungsten content, Tony gets another jolt. "Mike" has disappeared right before his eyes. Five minutes later she suddenly reappears, accompanied by an aldermanic looking personage whom she introduced as "Dad" or Pat Sweeney, her father. Following a short talk, Mike shows Tony the secret of her mysterious disappearance. This is an electrically operated door, swung open on a pivot as the rocky wall, and connecting with another chamber fitted up as a laboratory. Tony has already learned their tax title mine yields a tungsten-bearing ore of rich content.

Tony listens to an offer of $100,000 from Pat Sweeney for a one-fourth interest in the tax title purchase.

Tony agrees to talk the proposition over with Jack Stuart and his father, Peter Justin.

The Justin family discuss what should be done with the share of profits which would belong to a soldier supposed to have died in France.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XIV

"In view of all the circumstances," he said, after considering the matter from its various angles, "it seems to me the profits, whatever they prove to be, that are derived from the sale of this ore, should be divided into four equal shares. One of these fourths should be set aside for this soldier and every effort possible be made to locate him. It will be a question of law, in the event that he is found and claims his share, as to whether he is sole owner of the property or not. In the meantime it is our right, just as it seems to me—to get busy at once and remove this ore to Pittsburgh as quickly and with just as few knowing about it as possible!"

In response to a telephone invitation Pat Sweeney, accompanied by his daughter, Mike, arrived at the Stuart-Justin home shortly after 8 that evening. After introductions, the "only living Jiggs" immediately called the meeting to order.

"This," he began, when the adult members of the family and the two visitors were seated around the table in the "sitting room," "this is to be the wind-up in my speculative deals. I promised Mike here—beaming on the girl at his side—"that it would mark me finish. If nothing goes wrong we all stand to clean up a tidy sum apiece!"

"But things don't go wrong if plans go right!" emphasized the man from Chicago. "Even so," he added with the true gambler's instinct to "knock on wood" when boasting, "the best plans ever laid are subject to accident. All we can do is to eliminate the dangers in so far as we can. I think a chance on a beatin' chance happenin' to the finish! If this uncle of the sojer gets wind of our work—bloop! This too, some hijackers might get a line on things—think we were transporting 'moon' and—bump us off! So you see there's chances to tolke th' best we can do!"

"Tony says you mentioned something about guards going ahead—covering the route in advance of the trucks," said Jack Stuart, when the conversation Mr. Sweeney paused for a moment as if to re-coup his energies for a fresh start. "How would they protect a driver of a truck? Any hijackers planning to hold him up would be in ambuscade and hidden from the sight of advance guard, wouldn't they?"

"They might be if they had the exact dope as to which was which av th' two trucks," replied the director of ways and means. Then, he added, "That, by the way, is where we gotta be extra careful—to make sure no information leaks out regarding toime av trucks' departure and th' routes they are to take!"

"Oh, Jack, I'm—I'm almost afraid," was the wife's half-whispered contribution to the conference at this juncture. "There seems to be so much danger. I don't want you to get hurt, dear, to get shot or—maybe—killed!"

The remark was unfortunate in that it seemed to be the cue for a grand big laugh—the he-man's laugh at a woman's petty fears. Even the "zyrl Mike" smiled her approval of the bold, reassuring Urge of Valor trying to get a strange hold on Discretion, its well-known "better part!"

"Brace up, little woman, brace up!" admonished the adventurous young husband. "Think of the oodles of long green—a flivver coupe or sedan, new gowns, silk stockings and—everything!"

"Yes, but if you got killed, what good th' coupe, and th' silk stockings and—everything do th' then?" whimpered the fearful Jill, entirely unconscious of the beautiful confession of unselfish love revealed in her words. "We could get along without any coupe or sedan, but—"

"Score one for the girl Mary, named Mike!" he whispered.

"Oh, Jill—don't be a killjoy!" rudely interrupted Tony, with a brother's ruthless lack of manners and feelings when his sister's small grudge threatens his interests. Then he remembered that a guest was present and so made an effort to retrieve his mistake.

"Forgive me, Sis," he hastily added, "I didn't mean to speak so rude. But you mustn't be afraid. Jack isn't gonna get killed—nor kidnapped!"

"Nor Tony either—if quick ducking will have him!" was the snappy comment that popped from the red lips of the young guest they called Mike.

"The rosy tint of a glorious sunset flamed for an instant in cheek, forehead and throat of Tony, the Quick. Then, with a grin he turned to Pat Sweeney.

"Score one fr th' girl Mary named Mike!" he whispered sibilantly. "Tis a mean flapper she flaps!"

When their guests had departed and the quartet, Peter and Tony and Jack and Jill had regathered around the open grate, Tony turned an inquiring eye on his sister. "How dyuh think yuh'll like y'r future sister-in-law, Jill?" he asked, grinning like the famous Maltese cat.

And Jill, with the intuition so often found in women of pure French extraction, replied, saying: "If it's th' young person you call 'Mike' that you refer to as my possible sister-in-law, I'll tell you in plain words—I don't like her at all. Why, she never took her eyes off Jack th' whole blessed evening! He must have had her hypnotized! As for you, my poor boy—you haven't got a chance in th' world with her!"

And about the same time, or a little later, perhaps, two persons, father and daughter, standing before an open grate in a big room in a big house on the river bank, looked at each other and the father asked a question.

"How, Mike?" he queried, curiously, "do you tolke y'r bye friend's sister—the young wolfe an' mother they call Jill?"

And Mike, with the strange intuition so often found in women of pure Irish extraction, looked deep into the glowing coals and made answer, thusly: "Speaking by and large, and with all due respect to th' young woman's husband, who struck me as being a fine figure of a man, I think he picked something in the nature of a lemon for a wife! She acted awfully silly, I thought, giving away to tears, as she did in the presence of strangers. And besides, she wasn't half as fearful about him being killed as she pretended. That was for effect!"

Two trifling incidents, it might be said, scarcely worthy of comment in the passing. And yet it is the little things, as a rule, that go to make up life. Coming events, we are told, cast their shadows before, and those of the smaller often loom more portentous than the large.

In the weird twisting and turnings and the seemingly hopeless situations from which the characters in this drama of human events finally emerge, one is ever recall-

YOUNG TEDDY ROOSEVELT ACTS FOR COLONEL YOUNG'S WIDOW

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., son of the former president, who personally thanked and commended the late Col. Charles Young, Wilberforce, for his meritorious service to the country, has taken up the increased pension fight for his widow, Mrs. Ada M. Young, R. R. 6, Xenia.

Col. Roosevelt recently wrote a letter to Congressman Roy G. Fitzgerald, Dayton, who in turn replied that the bill to increase Mrs. Young's pension was in charge of Congressman Charles Brand of this congressional district.

Col. Young was the only colored man who ever received that rank in the United States army. When the World War broke out he had been retired but to show that he was still fit for service he rode horseback to Washington to ask for reinstatement in the service. He died in Liberia in January, 1922, while a military attaché to the U. S. Consulate there.

His mother, Mrs. Arminia Young, 83, makes her home with her daughter-in-law who also supports her two young children, Noel and Marie.

Col. Young is buried in Arlington Cemetery, Washington.

I Have Said in My Heart

By IDAH MCGLONE GIBSON
MUST YOUTH HAVE ITS FLING?

This is the children's age. Does it ever occur to you that we are making this a country of our children, for our children and by our children?

Are we not only laying up some great disaster for the coming generations, but making it very hard in the years to come for the youth for which we are giving up so much today? We are allowing the unthinking youthful tyrannies of our children to mar not only our lives but theirs as well. We are paying too much attention to their immature opinions.

We are told youth must be allowed to choose its own course. Its liberty of thought must not be curtailed by any suggestion of experience. No parent must entail upon a child a duty that does not appeal to it (and few duties do appeal). Its course, of study, its amusements, its social conventions, its friends, even its food and clothing, must be of its own choosing.

LORAIN MAN CLAIMS CAKE EATING TITLE

CLEVELAND, Feb. 4.—John Pummer, 23, of Lorain, claims the pancake eating championship of the state, and his record has not been disputed to date.

In a recent cold morning here, Pummer, sometimes called "Suicide Johnny" disposed of 88 pancakes, in a contest with Pat Joyce, Chicago. Joyce lasted through 71 cakes, then gave up the struggle. Spectators paid the bill—more than $5.00.

CO-OPERATION IN DIVORCES

DETROIT, Mich.—Close co-operation between two lifelong friends assisted to win decrees of divorce for both in Judge J. A. Moynihan's court. One complained that her husband was squandering his money on games of chance and failed to support her. Her friend took the stand as a witness and a divorce was granted. Then the position was reversed, and when the second woman charged that her husband, too, gambled and failed to support her, her friend testified for her. She also obtained a decree. Both departed from court, arm in arm and happy.

READ THIS FIRST:

Jill Justin, ultra-modern and as lambently lovely as 20 as the Saga Lily, starts out on a moon-lit night in August, accompanied by her brother Tony, to attend a harvest festival.

The two run into an automobile hold-up. Jill is kidnapped by bandits, who carry her into the hills, from where she is rescued by Jack Stuart, who takes her home.

It is the old story retold. Jack stays for a visit and remains to wed the lovely Jill. The passing of two years finds them the proud and happy parents of twin boys and a girl.

Now transpires an event destined to bring about radical changes in the lives of these people. Wandering through the hills back of the Justin home, Stuart stumbles onto an old abandoned mine. He also discovers what he believes to be ore-bearing rock.

It is Tony, however, in the following April, who brings in the big news. He is inveigled into the hills by a pretty girl, who tells him her name is Mary, but that she is "called Mike!" Mary, who is called "Mike" is driving a costly roadster, and she asks Tony to guide her to a place in the hills known as The Devil's Luck. Here she takes the lead and pilots him into an electrically lighted chamber. After telling him that his and Stuart's tax title mine yields an ore rich in tungsten content, Tony gets another jolt. "Mike" has disappeared right before his eyes. Five minutes later she suddenly reappears, accompanied by an aldermanic looking personage whom she introduced as "Dad" or Pat Sweeney, her father. Following a short talk, Mike shows Tony the secret of her mysterious disappearance. This is an electrically operated door, swung open on a pivot in the rocky wall, and connecting with another chamber fitted up as a laboratory. Tony has already learned their tax title mine yields a tungsten-bearing ore of rich content.

Tony listens to an offer of $100,000 from Pat Sweeney for a one-fourth interest in the tax title purchase.

Tony agrees to talk the proposition over with Jack Stuart and his father, Peter Justin.

The Justin family discuss what should be done with the share of profits which would belong to a soldier supposed to have died in France.

(Now Go On With The Story)

"In view of all the circumstances," he said, after considering the matter from its various angles, "it seems to me the profits, whatever they prove to be, that are derived from the sale of this ore, should be divided into four equal shares. One of these fourths should be set aside for this soldier and every effort possible be made to locate him. It will be a question of law, in the event that he is found and claims his share, as to whether he is sole owner of the property or not. In the meantime it is our right, just as this man Sweeney says—or so it seems to me—to get busy at once and remove this ore to Pittsburgh as quickly and with just as few knowing about it as possible!"

In response to a telephone invitation Pat Sweeney, accompanied by his daughter, Mike, arrived at the Stuart-Justin home shortly after 8 that evening. After introductions, the "only living Jiggs" immediately called the meeting to order.

"This," he began, when the adult members of the family and the two visitors were seated around the table in the "sitting room," "this is to be the wind-up in my speculative deals. I promised Mike here—beaming on the girl at his side—that it would mark me finish. If nothing goes wrong we all stand to clean up a tidy sum apiece!"

"But things don't go wrong if plans go right!" emphasized the man from Chicago. "Even so," he added with the true gambler's instinct to "knock on wood" when boasting, "th' bist plans iver laid are subject to accident. All we c'n do is to eliminate th' dangers in soigt an' thin take a chance on beatin' chance happenin' to th' finish! If this uncle of th' sojer lad gets wind of our work—blowee! Thin, too, some hijackers might get a line on things—think we were transporting 'moon' and—bump us off! So yez see there's chances to tolke th' bist we c'n do!"

"Tony says you mentioned something about guards going ahead—covering th' route in advance of th' trucks," said Jack Stuart, when the conversational Mr. Sweeney paused for a moment as if to re-coup his energies for a fresh start. "How would they protect a driver of a truck? Any hijackers planning to hold him up would be in ambush and hidden from th' sight of advance guard, wouldn't they?"

"They might be if they had th' exact dope as to which was which as th' two trucks," replied the director of ways and means. Then, he added, "That, by th' way, is where we gotta be extra careful—to make sure no information leaks out regarding th' mine av' trucks' departure and th' routes they are to take!"

"Oh, Jack, I'm—I'm almost—afraid," was the wife's half-whispered contribution to the conference at this juncture. "There seems to be so much danger. I don't want you to get hurt, dear, to get—shot or—maybe—killed!"

The remark was unfortunate in that it seemed to be the cue for a grand big laugh—the he-man's laugh at a woman's petty fears. Even the "gyrul Mike" smiled her approval of the bold, reassuring Urge of Valor trying to get a strangle hold on Discretion. Its well-known "better part!"

"Brace up, little woman, brace up!" admonished the adventurous young husband. "Think of th' oodles of long green—a flivver coupe or sedan, new gowns, silk stockings and—everything!"

"Yes, but if you got killed, what good'd th' coupe, and th' silk stockings and—everything do the then?" whimpered the fearful Jill, entirely unconscious of the beautiful confession of unselfish love

"Score one for the girl Mary, named Mike!" he whispered.

revealed in her words. "We could get along without any coupe or sedan, but—"

"Oh, Jill—don't be a killjoy!" rudely interrupted Tony, with a brother's ruthless lack of manners and feelings when his sister's small grievances threaten his interests. Then he remembered that a guest was present and so made an effort to retrieve his mistake.

"Forgive me, Sis," he hastily added, "I didn't mean to speak so rude. But you mustn't be afraid. Jack isn't gonna get killed—nor kidnapped!"

"Nor Tony either—if quick ducking will have him!" was the snappy comment that popped from the red lips of the young guest they called Mike.

The rosy tint of a glorious sunset flamed for an instant in cheek, forehead and throat of Tony, the Quick. Then, with a grin he turned to Pat Sweeney.

"Score one for th' girl Mary named Mike!" he whispered sibilantly. "Tis a mean flapper she flaps!"

When their guests had departed and the quartet, Peter and Tony and Jack and Jill had regathered around the open grate, Tony turned an inquiring eye on his sister. "How d'yuh think yuh'll like y'r future sister-in-law, Jill?" he asked, grinning like the famous Maitresse cat. And Jill, with the intuition so often found in women of pure French extraction, replied, saying:

"If it's th' young person you call 'Mike' that you refer to as my possible sister-in-law, I'll tell you in plain words—I don't like her at all. Why, she never took her eyes off Jack th' whole blessed evening! He must have had her hypnotized! As for you, my poor boy—you haven't got a chance in th' world with her!"

And about the same time, or a little later, perhaps, two persons, father and daughter, standing before an open grate in a big room in a big house on the river bank, looked at each other and the father asked a question.

"How, Mike?" he queried, curiously, "do you like y'r friend's sister—the young wolve an' mither they call Jill?"

And Mike, with the strange intuition so often found in women of pure Irish extraction, looked deep into the glowing coals and made answer thusly:

"Speaking by and large, and with all due respect to th' young woman's husband, who struck me as being a fine figure of a man, I think he picked something in th' nature of a lemon for a wife! She acted awfully silly, I thought, giving away to tears, as she did in th' presence of strangers. And besides, she wasn't half as fearful about him being killed as she pretended. That was for effect!"

Two trifling incidents, it might be said, scarcely worthy of comment in the passing. And yet it is the little things, as a rule, that go to make up life. Coming events, we are told, cast their shadows before, and those of the smaller often loom more portentous than the large.

In the weird twisting and turnings and the seemingly hopeless situations from which the characters in this drama of human events finally emerge, one is ever recall-

YOUNG TEDDY ROOSEVELT ACTS FOR COLONEL YOUNG'S WIDOW

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., son of the former president, who personally thanked and commended the late Col. Charles Young, Wilberforce, for his meritorious service to the country, has taken up the increased pension fight for his widow, Mrs. Ada M. Young, R. R. 6, Xenia.

Col. Roosevelt recently wrote a letter to Congressman Roy G. Fitzgerald, Dayton, who in turn replied that the bill to increase Mrs. Young's pension was in charge of Congressman Charles Brand of this congressional district. Col. Young was the only colored man who ever received that rank in the United States army.

When the World War broke out he had been retired but to show that he was still fit for service he rode horseback to Washington to ask for reinstatement in the service. He died in Liberia in January, 1922, while a military attaché to the U. S. Consulate there.

His mother, Mrs. Arminia Young, 83, makes her home with her daughter-in-law who also supports her two young children, Noel and Marie.

Col. Young is buried in Arlington Cemetery, Washington.

I Have Said in My Heart

By IDAH MCGILGIBSON
MUST YOUTH HAVE ITS FLING?

This is the children's age. Does it ever occur to you that we are making this a country of our children, for our children and by our children?

Are we not only laying up some great disaster for the coming generations, but making it very hard for which we are giving up so much today? We are allowing the unthinking youthful tyrannies of our children to mar not only our lives but theirs as well. We are paying too much attention to their immature opinions.

We are told youth must be allowed to choose its own course. Its liberty of thought must not be curtailed by any suggestion of experience. No parent must entail upon a child a duty that does not appeal to it (and few duties do appeal). Its course of study, its amusements, its social conventions, its friends, even its food and clothing, must be of its own choosing.

LORAIN MAN CLAIMS CAKE EATING TITLE

CLEVELAND, Feb. 4.—John Pummer, 23, of Lorain, claims the pancake eating championship of the state, and his record has not been disputed to date.

In a recent cold morning here, Pummer, sometimes called "Suicide Johnny" disposed of 88 pancakes, in a contest with Pat Joyce, Chicago. Joyce lasted through 71 cakes, then gave up the struggle. Spectators paid the bill—more than $5.00.

CO-OPERATION IN DIVORCES

DETROIT, Mich.—Close co-operation between two lifelong friends assisted to win decrees of divorce for both in Judge J. A. Moynihan's court. One complained that her husband was squandering his money on games of chance and failed to support her. Her friend took the stand as a witness and a divorce was granted. Then the position was reversed, and when the second woman charged that her husband, too, gambled and failed to support her, her friend testified for her. She also obtained a decree. Both departed from court, arm in arm and happy.
